Cover: A meander or meandros (Μαίανδρος), a design also called the Greek fret or Greek key design, is a decorative border constructed from a continuous line, shaped in a repeated motif. On the one hand, the name «meander» recalls the twisting and turning path of the Maeander River in Asia Minor, and on the other hand, the meander is the figure of a labyrinth in linear form.

A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature

Fourth Edition
revised and edited by Frederick William Danker

based on

Walter Bauer's Griechisch-deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, sixth edition, edited by Kurt Aland and Barbara Aland, with Viktor Reichmann and on previous English editions by W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker

The University of Chicago Press | Chicago and London

First edition, 1957, translated and adapted by William F. Arndt and F. Wilbur Gingrich from the fourth edition of Walter Bauer's lexicon.

Second edition, 1979, revised and augmented by F. W. Gingrich and F. W. Danker from W. Bauer's fifth edition.

Third edition, 2000, revised and edited by Frederick William Danker based on Walter Bauer's Griechisch-deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, sixth edition, edited by Kurt Aland and Barbara Aland, with Viktor Reichmann and on previous English editions by W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker

The contents of the fourth edition are the same of the third, with several typos corrected. Also the typography was completely remade with Brill, a modern typeface by John Hudson. Transliterations of the entries were added and words with hyperlinks enable easy navigation inside the lexicon.

Frederick William Danker is Christ Seminary-Seminex Professor Emeritus of New Testament at the Lutheran School of Theology, Chicago, Illinois.

Foreword to the Revised Edition

MUCH OF THE HISTORICAL MATERIAL in forewords to the earlier editions of this lexicon is here included in condensed form.

The history of dictionaries specifically designed for the Greek New Testament opens with a Greek-Latin glossary of seventy-five unnumbered pages in the first volume of the Complutensian Polyglot of 1522, including the words of the New Testament, Ecclesiasticus, and the Wisdom of Solomon. The incompleteness, inaccuracy, and elementary character of this glossary reflect the low state of Greek studies at the time it was published, but it was the first in a long and useful succession of New Testament lexical works. More in keeping with scholarly demands was the Lexicon Graeco-Latinum in Novum Domini nostri Jesu Christi Testamentum by Georg Pasor, published in 1619 at Herborn in Nassau. Pasor listed words alphabetically according to their roots, a procedure also adopted by Francis Brown, Samuel R. Driver, and Charles A. Briggs in their Hebrew-Aramaic lexicon of 1907. In 1640 (Basel), Ludovicus Lucius put out his Dictionarium Novi Testamenti with words arranged for the first time in strict alphabetic order instead of by word-roots.

Many faults of contemporary NT lexicons were pointed out by Johann F. Fischer in his Prolusiones de vitiis lexicorum Novi Testamenti (Leipzig, 1791). Among these defects were neglect of the smaller words, whose frequent use makes them extremely difficult to analyze and classify, and insufficient attention to the background of New Testament words in Hebrew, the LXX, and general Greek literature.

Among the works that showed the effect of Fischer's criticism was Christian A. Wahl's Greek-Latin lexicon of 1822 (Leipzig). This was translated into English in 1825 by Edwin Robinson, an eminent American biblical scholar. Robinson brought out his own Greek-English dictionary of the NT in 1836 (Boston).

Up to this time it was customary for dictionaries intended for scholars to provide definitions in Latin, though Edward Leigh in his Critica Sacra (London, 1639) had made a partial and apologetic attempt to give them in English, and John Parkhurst had published a Greek-English lexicon in 1769. Karl Ludwig Wilibald Grimm published in 1868 (Leipzig) a thorough revision of Christian G. Wilke's Greek-Latin Clavis Novi Testamenti philologica (1839; 2d ed. 1851). Four years earlier, through special arrangement with Grimm's publisher, Joseph H. Thayer of Harvard University began the augmented translation of Grimm's book, published in 1886 as Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament (New York and Edinburgh).

The first dictionary to appear after the epoch-making discoveries (especially of papyri) near the end of the nineteenth century was Erwin Preuschen's Greek-German lexicon of 1910. Unfortunately, it failed to make much use of the newfound material, which was of little interest to some scholars because of its documentary banality compared to the purity of Plato's tongue. But Preuschen's work did include for the first time the words of the Apostolic Fathers.

Upon Preuschen's untimely death in 1920, the revision of his lexicon was entrusted to Walter Bauer of Göttingen (b. 8 August 1877, d. 17 November 1960). When his revision appeared in 1928 (Giessen) as the second edition of Preuschen, it was hailed as the best thing in its field. A third edition, thoroughly revised and reset, came out in 1937 (Berlin), with Bauer's name alone on the title page.

For the fourth edition, Bauer undertook a systematic search in Greek literature down to Byzantine times for parallels to the language of the New Testament. Hans von Campenhausen acknowledged the magnitude of this task, when he reviewed its first three fascicles (TLZ 75, 1950, 349): We are here dealing with a work "which, when considered as the performance of one man, strikes one as almost fabulous. Not only was there a gigantic amount of material to be mastered, involving the most minute acquaintance with the whole body of Christian literature, but this task required at the same time the gift of combining and relating facts, and of preserving an adequate scholarly alertness which is granted to but few people; one thinks of the difficulty of immediately recognizing parallels in the respective authors and making proper use of them. This art is all the more admirable because its achievements manifest themselves only in the apparently insignificant form of articles in a lexicon, which purposely are kept as brief and factual as possible. Most of the readers will normally not become aware of what has been accomplished." F. Wilbur Gingrich echoed the accolade (NTS 9, 1962–63, 3–10).

On this fourth edition of Bauer's Griechisch-deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der übrigen urchristlichen Literatur (Berlin, 1949–52), William F. Arndt (b. 1 December 1880, d. 25 February 1957) and F. Wilbur Gingrich (b. 27 September 1901, d. 19 October 1993) based A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature (also known as BAG, for Bauer-Arndt-Gingrich). It was not their purpose to make a literal translation, which would indeed have been impossible; and they did not hesitate to recommend recourse to Bauer's original German to determine “exactly what Bauer says about any word.” Their own contribution to the work was considerable, to judge from the list of over ninety entries cited as representative of “more or less significant adaptations or additions” in their 1957 edition.

In the course of making slight adjustments in the arrangement of entries, as well as correction of typographical and other errors in the original, Arndt and Gingrich added a few new words drawn especially from Papias and the apparatus in later editions of the NT text, not to speak of an interesting conjecture, ἀπαρτί, included for the first time in a NT lexicon. In addition to Bauer’s bibliographical notices, the American team called attention to the contributions of James Hope Moulton and George Milligan’s Vocabulary of the Greek Testament (M-M) and Carl D. Buck’s Dictionary of Selected Synonyms in the Principal Indo-European Languages. The latter partially made up for the paucity of etymological information deplored by Bauer in the foreword to his third edition of 1937. References were likewise given to all the words treated by Edgar J. Goodspeed in his Problems of New Testament Translation, and to some from Frederick Field’s Notes on the Translation of the New Testament. Frequent reference was also made to the NT grammars of James Hope Moulton (2d vol. completed by Wilbert F. Howard) and Archibald T. Robertson. Still remaining to be probed in depth is the phenomenon of similar semantic transference in languages whose users are separated by centuries, but Arndt and Gingrich offered some stimulus through exploration here and there of the New (Oxford) English Dictionary.

In their preface, Arndt and Gingrich sketched a brief history of their own endeavor: “When in 1947 the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod observed its centennial, a part of the thank offering gathered was set aside as a fund for scholarly research. The Lutheran Academy of Scholarship, Dr. M. H. Scharlemann president, had a prominent part in the discussions that led to this decision. The committee, appointed by Dr. J. W. Behnken, the president of the church, to administer the fund, resolved to have Bauer’s Wörterbuch done into English with such adaptations and additions as would be required. Since the University of Chicago Press had been negotiating with Dr. Bauer on this subject, the committee turned to this publishing house and enlisted its co-operation and services. The translation rights were duly obtained. Professor F. W. Gingrich of Albright College, Reading, Pa., was engaged to give his full time to the undertaking, having been granted a leave of absence in September 1949. Professor W. F. Arndt of Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, Mo., an institution of the Lutheran Church–Missouri Synod, was appointed to be the director of the venture. The manuscript was finished in January 1955. This dictionary in its English dress constitutes a gift of the Lutheran Church–Missouri Synod to the English-speaking world, presented in the hope that the work may assist in the interpretation and dissemination of the Divine Word which lives and abides forever.”

Yet, even as the first volumes were coming off the press, plans for a revised edition began to take shape. When the English translation of Walter Bauer’s Wörterbuch was published on 29 January 1957, Prof. Bauer was completing work on the fifth edition of his book, which came out in nine fascicles during 1957 and 1958. Upon the death of Prof. Arndt, my revered teacher, I was asked to serve with Prof. Gingrich in the preparation of the new edition, which was to contain the new material in Bauer’s work and a vast amount of reference to studies that postdated it. The number of such and other supplemental references to scholarly literature ran into four figures (apart from Bauer’s own additions). More important, the standard ancient Greek texts, as well as papyri and inscriptions, yielded additional formal and semantic parallels, in some cases necessitating rearrangement of patterns of definition. References to the literature of Qumran and to texts of portions of the New Testament published since the first edition were frequent. Indeed, the number of new words and other variants that were incorporated reflects the contribution made especially by the Bodmer Papyri to the study of the New Testament. Without the encouragement and support of the Committee for Scholarly Research of the Lutheran Church–Missouri Synod, the project could not have been undertaken, and the editors accorded their warmest thanks to Prof. Lorman M. Petersen of Concordia Theological Seminary (located at that time in Springfield, Illinois) for providing the necessary leadership. This second edition of BAG was published in 1979 and became known as BAGD (Bauer-Arndt-Gingrich-Danker). The present edition (BDAG: Bauer-Danker-Arndt-Gingrich) builds on traditions established in these earlier editions and the more recent publication of a sixth edition of Walter Bauer’s work (Griechisch-deutsches Wörterbuch [Walter de Gruyter: Berlin, New York, 1988]), a “völlig neu bearbeitete Auflage” by Kurt Aland (d. 13 April 1994) and Barbara Aland, with substantial assistance from Viktor Reichmann (therefore known as BAAR). Through the guidance of Dr. Walter L. Rosin, the Committee for Scholarly Research of the Lutheran Church–Missouri Synod has again demonstrated its fervent support of New Testament lexical study.

As already indicated, any lexicographic endeavor worth its name must evolve in a context of new discoveries and constantly changing theoretical structures. Yet the claims of tradition are strong, and some balance must be maintained between contemporary demand and vision of what the future must inevitably require. In any event, judgments relating to a variety of approaches and modes of presentation of data will inevitably differ, as the publication of any new lexicon creates a crop of instant lexicographers. And this is as it should be. “Every other author may aspire to praise; the lexicographer can only hope to escape reproach, and even this negative recompense has been yet granted to very few.” So wrote Samuel Johnson in a preface to his Dictionary.

This revision makes a primary departure in the use of bold roman typeface to highlight the meanings of words or their functional usage. Traditionally, lexicons have shown a preference for definition of a word in the source language with a corresponding word or phrase in the receptor language. A series of words or glosses is then offered to cover a variety of possibilities for translation. But these alleged meanings are for the most part mere formal equivalents, and in the case of words that occur very frequently in a language they run the hazard of being devoid of semantic value. Even worse, an unwary reader may think that a given word bears all the content expressed by a series of synonyms. Not to speak of the student whose primary language is not English and who therefore may not understand distinctions between the English synonyms that supposedly define a given Greek term. In an effort to overcome this problem, this revision builds on and expands Bauer’s use of extended definition. This approach permits readers to explore the semantic structures of their own native language for adequate interpretation without the need of first deciphering the meaning of various glosses or synonyms. In this lexicon an arabic numeral at the head of a classification signifies that all the passages contained in that classification share a given meaning structure. Numerous entries therefore variously modify some older classifications that were based on mere grammatical or theological distinctions. Subsets of a meaning or collections of data relating to it—such as Bauer’s valuable collections of grammatical or theological association—are indicated, as needed, through the traditional use of lettering a, b, α, β, and Ⲱ, 𐤀. Some words, such as ἀχαριστέω or γαμέω, do not require multiple classifications: in such instances no arabic numeral is used and any subsets follow the pattern cited above. Extended definitions are given in bold roman and may be followed by one or more formal equivalents in bold italics. The user of the lexicon can explore such equivalents for translation of passages that follow, but within the boundaries of the definition. When a formal equivalent is sufficient to convey the meaning, as marry in the entry γαμέω, this meaning stands in bold italics without extended definition. Normal italic type is used for suggested translation equivalents. In short, pains have been taken to provide readers with ample resources to form an independent critical judgment.

One of the more noteworthy developments in biblical studies in the latter third of the twentieth century relates to appreciation of ancient documents as literary monuments in their own right, an awareness that had been exhibited by students of Homer, Plato, et al. for a far longer period of time. Such awareness, together with increased emphasis on the relevance of anthropological and sociological studies for interpretation of ancient texts, places new demands on the lexicographer, and the current revision endeavors to reflect developments in this area. Also of concern are respect for inclusiveness and tolerance. But a scientific work dare not become a reservoir for ideological pleading, and culture-bound expressions must be given their due lest history be denied its day in court. It is an undeniable fact that God is primarily viewed patriarchally in the Bible, but translation must avoid exaggeration of the datum. “Brother” is a legitimate rendering of many instances of the term ἀδελφός, but when it appears that the term in the plural includes women (as in a letter to a congregation) some functional equivalent, such as “brothers and sisters”, is required. A special problem relates to the use of “Jew” as a formal equivalent for Ἰουδαίος. Much acrimonious debate has been needlessly engendered by use of an English term that bears an historical burden calculated to distort understanding of the term as used in New Testament texts. In the interest of more scientific discussion of texts, this revision resorts to the loanword “Judean” to render Ἰουδαίος, but uses the term “Jew” in historical observations. Problems of a related nature involve terms that have experienced ecclesiastical evolution. To translate διάκονος or ἐπίσκοπος respectively as “deacon” and “bishop” would contaminate the rendering of ancient texts with associations made in later periods in which the English terms have taken on a technical sense that cannot be established for the original biblical terms. Frequently time-honored expressions are therefore given parenthetical status. In a related vein, a lexicographer is not obligated to celebrate opaqueness as a virtue in translation, when such opaqueness would suggest an opaqueness not present in the original. The fact that a given word or phrase has become a subject of intense debate during centuries of special theological or dogmatic pleading ought not automatically impose a judgment of unclarity or ambiguity on the original text.

A signal contribution of the German sixth edition of Walter Bauer’s lexicon is the generous account taken of intertestamental resources. The broader coverage of early Christian literature includes especially apocryphal material associated with the name of Paul, and notably the Acts of Paul in various papyrus fragments. Also welcome is the vastly increased use of early Christian apologists (esp. Aristides, Athenagoras, Justin, and Tatian) for the understanding of NT diction. Among other frequent visitors from the past are Irenaeus and Origen. The present revision incorporates the new material, sometimes in updated and corrected form, as is apparent, e.g., from entries based on AcPl BMM (s. Abbreviation List 1). To assist the user in more ready location of early Christian material formerly found in generally inaccessible German publications, use is made of Prof. Kurt Aland’s *Synopsis Quattuor Evangeliorum*¹³ 1988 by citation of section number and line for such items as GPt and GNaass. Bauer received some criticism for proliferation of references to Greek literature, but contemporary biblical study endorses his judgment, and the present edition increases the coverage, in part to reinforce Bauer’s awareness of the role of non-verbal linguistic components relating especially to socio-cultural perspectives. Indeed, in some instances the heaping of references is necessary to discourage risky assumptions of literary dependency on a single alleged source. Also, where Semitic influence appears to be strong, parallel Hellenic usage indicates that the Semitic cast may not be barbarous, as noted in G. H. R. Horsley’s study on bilingualism in New Documents 5 (1989) 5–40. The latter work, now in eight volumes, has also been mined for papyrological and epigraphical references, which supplement material derived from Moulton-Milligan (M-M), Vocabulary of the Greek Testament. In this connection it is necessary to note that some entries in the Vocabulary are, in the absence of papyrus evidence, sources only for literary data or exegetical observations. For detailed etymological observations the reader is urged to note the acronym “DELG”, with occasional reference to “Frisk” (s. List 6 for both).

To meet one of the major criticisms of previous editions, this revision offers a total overhaul of the lists of abbreviations. Users have complained that many references were in such abbreviated form that it was difficult to trace the sources. As partial remedy, the abbreviation lists cite many names and titles that appeared in earlier editions but were left undefined. From the listing of these new works one ought not therefore infer that all the new names result from an increase in the bibliographic base. A by-product of this procedure is the avoidance of multiplication of data in the main text, especially chronological, e.g. in connection with Fragmente der Griechischen Historiker (FGrH/Jac.) and numerous poets and dramatists. No apologies are here offered for preservation of Bauer’s bibliographical data. The editors of BAAR excised much of it, but numerous lemmata in their edition now record cross-references to excised material. Indeed, it would be inappropriate to delete titles that provided a large amount of data for Bauer’s entries, and it would be necessary first to determine which titles could be safely jettisoned without loss of carefully garnered data and well-pondered interpretations that are not to be had elsewhere. The fact that many subsequent discussions, including especially commentaries, fail to take account of numerous important books and articles referenced by Bauer makes their preservation all the more urgent. Inclusion of additional bibliography in certain entries in the present edition will give the reader access to other lines of inquiry. Scholars known for a commentary on a specific NT book are, in keeping with Bauer’s practice, ordinarily noted only by surname in connection with NT references. Inasmuch as previous abbreviation lists were erroneously interpreted by some users as bibliographies for the entire work, it is important to note that the lists serve to interpret short titles or abbreviations and do not take notice of studies for which sufficient data are included in the main text. With a few exceptions, no attempt has been made to record the dates of reprints of older works. It also proved impossible, given the enormity of the task, to check more than a small percentage of Bauer’s citations of ancient authors against the vast number of newer editions. This editor therefore welcomes, for inclusion in another publication, any contributions derived from such effort that might affect lexicographic judgment.

For the most part, the abbreviations follow generally recognized standards, including the Checklist of Editions of Greek and Latin Papyri, Ostraca and Tablets (Bulletin of the American Society of Papyrologists, Suppl. 7, 1992) and “Instructions for Contributors”, published periodically in the Journal of Biblical Literature. In support of the efforts of Australian scholars G. H. R. Horsley and John A. Lee to standardize epigraphic abbreviations, references to epigraphs in List 3 generally follow their pattern. Since BDAG is of interest to scholars in numerous disciplines, some abbreviations may vary from standard practice, as, e.g., “ClB”, whose abbreviation ordinarily is “CB”. Similarly, Bauer’s abbreviation “Pauly-W.” (Pauly-Wissowa) departs from the standard “RE”, which is applied in biblical circles to a different “Realencyklopädie”. Some users might wish that such variations had been multiplied, but that would have defeated the objective of substantial standardization. Some items appear in more than one abbreviated form, but in some cases the lack of standardized forms in titles, or simply the fact that the source language is different from English—e.g., Henoch (German) = En—requires such variation. As an antidote to annoyance created by the liberal use of abbreviations, readers may console themselves with the fact that the bulk and therefore price of the lexicon are substantially reduced by such procedure. Out of courtesy to readers, the publishers have also encouraged the inclusion of a composite listing of all the abbreviations from the various lists. Instead of wandering through six lists for the identity of some ZYX, the reader will find its resolution in the composite list or be directed to a specific list.

The principal New Testament textual base is Nestle-Aland²⁷ (s. N. at the beginning of List 1). Some of the words appearing in BDAG are not noted in the apparatus of that edition. Frequent account is taken of variant readings which are not recorded in the Nestle-Aland apparatus. Thus the word γενέθλιος appears Mk 6:21 in codex D, and is so noted in BAAR, but not in the Nestle-Aland apparatus. Although some words, such as ἀκαθάρτης or νάρκη, would not ordinarily merit attention, either because they are editorial inventions which have wormed their way into respected editions without strict accounting (e.g., some Erasmus readings) or are the result of erroneous restoration of a fragmentary text, their appearance in learned discussions requires identification with cautionary notice in this lexicon. Since little advantage is to be gained by cluttering the lexicon with an unscientific collection of selected manuscript sigla, users of the lexicon are encouraged to find the sources for such variants in earlier editions of Nestle, in Tischendorf (s. Tdf. at the beginning of List 1), or in other critical editions. For related reasons I have not included in citation of text the brackets used in many passages in Nestle-Aland.

The proliferation of papyri and new editions of early Christian literature suggests caution about certainty respecting completeness of citation. The use of asterisks (indicating completeness of citation, either of the NT or the Apostolic Fathers or both) at the end of entries has therefore been abandoned. But students can count on completeness of citation of all except the most common words appearing in the main text of the 27th edition of Nestle.

Future revisions of this lexicon will probably feature inclusion of lexemes from early Christian pseudepigrapha that are not found in the present text. Apart from fragmentary papyri, limited references are presently made to the Apocryphal Acts of the Apostles (Aa). Increased acquaintance especially with lectionaries will also provide a fund of terms that can enrich the vocabulary base. A major development will most certainly be the bestowal of greater attention on idiomatic usage.

Preparation of this lexicon has required the rereading of many ancient texts, renewed assessment of countless NT texts, and the scrutiny of all early Christian material not used in earlier editions of the lexicon. Much of the inquiry called for reams of out-of-print material, copies of which were made available through the following assistants: Dawn Hass, Jan Harbough, Linda Kersten, Michelle Ports, Nancy Werner, and Crysta Wille. To the Rev. Ms. Dawn Hass I owe thanks also for proofreading of a substantial portion of the text, and to the Rev. Mr. David Householder for scrutinizing select portions. For acute observations, solid suggestions, and careful reading of at least five hundred pages of laser printouts I am especially indebted to Prof. James Voelz, who has challenged old perceptions with his seminal philological work. Many of the references to contemporary studies in periodicals owe their presence to the careful industry of Prof. Mikeal C. Parsons, whose work on literary analysis of New Testament writings has broken new ground. In earlier editions scholars were invited to communicate suggestions and corrections. Prof. Dr. Rykle Borger, of Göttingen, has been extraordinarily helpful in the refining process through various studies and reviews, including especially “Zum Stande der neutestamentlichen Lexicographie”, GGA 241 (1989) 103–46; and “NA²⁶ und die neutestamentliche Textkritik”, TRu 52 (1987) 1–58 and 326. Although the present work is necessarily of a different order from that of Johannes P. Louw and Eugene A. Nida (Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament Based on Semantic Domains, 2 vols., 1988), their forward linguistic thrust has left its mark, along with generously shared verbal echoes, and I am delighted to recommend their lexicon to all students who are serious about rendering the Greek of the New Testament into idiom that is translatable beyond narrow national borders. Responses to requests in previous editions for suggestions and corrections came from all ends of the planet, and many of the changes introduced in this revision attest their impact. Besides Prof. Borger, those who responded especially bountifully include H. Braunert, D. J. Georgacas, and Peter Katz (Rev. Dr. W. P. M. Walters). The same request therefore goes forth with this revision. For notice especially of cut-and-paste errors or related computer glitches I will be grateful. In the preparation of copy I have used SoftQuad’s Author/Editor program, adapted especially for this project at Dallas Theological Seminary by Steve de Rosa, Hal Thompson, and their assistants. Electronics expert Thomas Thomas looked constantly after the health of my computer. To the staff responsible for production at the University of Chicago, I cannot express warm enough thanks. Bruce Barton used his electronic wizardry in solution of numerous technical problems. For their discerning scrutiny and preparation of my manuscript I commend the following assistants at the University of Chicago Press editorial offices: Mieke Holkeboer, Jessica Vande Vusse, and Michael Lee. No words can possibly express gratitude commensurate with the contributions of copy editor Kathryn Krug. Her constant stream of stimulating queries, critical observations, and encouraging sense of humor turned what can be at times sheer drudgery into exciting enterprise. I can think of no better term than the Greek word ἀρετή to characterize the Press’s associate director, Penelope Kaiserlian, and her cohorts. They are truly people of “exceptional excellence”. With the completion of this foreword I am also able to keep a promise made to Lois, my wife. For more than five years she has been surrounded by stacks of boxes and done without a dining room table. It is now hers again, and friends, some of whom may have lost all hope, can be invited back. Finally, to the One whose Word surpasses all other words, I say εὐχαριστῶ, in full awareness that numerous lexicons remain unfinished as monuments to human fragility. As my predecessors concluded their foreword to the first edition:

An Introduction to the Lexicon of the Greek New Testament

Walter Bauer

[The translation¹ by W. F. Arndt and F. W. Gingrich of Walter Bauer's essay and notes is here reproduced without comment from the second English edition, but with a few formal alterations relating especially to abbreviations and addition in brackets of classification in BDAG. The timeless value of much of the essay will be apparent to discerning readers, who will form their own judgments from a comparison of Bauer's data with developments in New Testament lexicography since publication of this remarkable essay.—F.W.D.]

THE SECOND EDITION OF THE Griechisch-deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der übrigen urchristlichen Literatur of 1928, which reached its fourth edition in 1952, contained in its opening pages a short 'introduction' to its use. The exigencies of space and the desire to keep the price of the book as reasonable as possible caused the omission of these pages in later editions. This was deplored by certain scholars whose judgment on the lexicon was favorable, among them A. Deissmann in the Deutsche Literaturzeitung (1937), p. 520. Their ranks were joined by A. Fridrichsen, the editor of the series 'Coniectanea Neotestamentica,' who declared himself ready to give the introduction a new home in his series. The publishers also gave their consent, for which they deserve our gratitude. Accordingly, it is here presented once more, with some corrections and a supplement.

The earliest Christian literature, with which this book deals, is made up of a number of writings which were composed in the Greek language. It is not the Greek of more ancient times, least of all that of the Golden Age of Athens which is now taught in the institutions of higher learning and occupies the most prominent place in the dictionaries used in them. A comparison reveals, on the contrary, differences in phonology and morphology, in syntax and style, and, not least of all, in the vocabulary as well. These divergences are too plain to have remained unnoticed. When in the seventeenth century the learned controversy about the purity of New Testament Greek arose, the so-called 'Hebraists' tried to explain the peculiarities of this Greek as due to the influence of the Hebrew. Although they shot wide of the mark in some of their conclusions, their recognition of the special character of the New Testament language constituted a strong impetus in the right direction, when compared with the conception of their opponents, the 'purists,' whose attempt to demonstrate that the Holy Spirit inspired the New Testament writers with as fine and pure a Greek as any classical author ever wrote could not maintain itself indefinitely.

However, neither did the Hebraists achieve a real grasp of the situation. This was due largely to the fact that philology at that time knew the Greek language only from its literature and consequently fell into the error of equating Greek with the literary language. In addition, the writings contemporaneous with the New Testament, upon which they based their judgments, were deeply colored by Atticism, an artificial revival of the classical language. This prevented recognition of the truth that Greek had been developing since the days of the Attic orators and Plato, as any living language must. This judgment, one-sided to say the least, was destined to hold the field as long as formal literature was almost the only source of our knowledge. But the situation took a decided change when, in the 1890s, there began to appear in great abundance those volumes which make available to the learned world the Greek papyri found in Egypt. As a result, interest was awakened, too, in the earlier isolated publications of similar nature, and it spread to other non-literary sources: the ostraca (fragments of broken pottery which served as cheap writing materials) and inscriptions. In all of them we have witnesses of the speech of daily life, especially in its colloquial form, in so far as they avoid the influence of custom, formula, and school—and infinitely many do just that! Here, at length, was discovered the proper background for a truly scientific view of the language of the oldest Christian literature. The honor of having been discoverer and pathfinder in this field belongs to Adolf Deissmann, who, beginning in 1895, demonstrated to us more and more clearly—both in numerous single investigations and in comprehensive works—that our literature on the whole represents the late Greek colloquial language, which, to be sure, some authors used with more literary polish, others with less. The upper and lower limits of our literature in this respect are marked by Hb, MPol, and Dg on the literary side, and Rv on the colloquial.²

While theology in particular became interested in these discoveries, so recently made or appreciated, because they provided the possibility of arriving at a better understanding of the language of the Greek Bible, this newly discovered field appeared no less attractive to classical philology as well. As a matter of fact, philologists now had the opportunity—of which they made good use—to investigate thoroughly what was known even in ancient times as the ‘Koine,’ ἡ κοινὴ διάλεκτος, ‘the common language.’ This ‘common language’ was formed from the old dialects (Ionic, Attic, Doric, Aeolic) by a mixture to which, as one might expect, the Attic made the greatest contribution. Then, in almost complete homogeneity, it conquered the Hellenistic world.

Peculiarities characteristic of the Koine are met first in the fifth century b.c. Perhaps, indeed, we may speak of a Koine, or at least its beginnings, in this early period when, in the time of the first Athenian maritime empire, the need was felt of a common Greek language for purposes of communication. Complete development and displacement of the dialects, however, were not achieved by the common language until toward the end of the fourth century b.c., when, through the agency of Alexander the Great of Macedonia, not Attic, nor Ionic, but Greek conquered the Eastern world. In the kingdoms of the Diadochi it expanded and confirmed its domain, while the Romans, their successors in the rule of the East, preserved it carefully and made it serve their own interests. Furthermore, the Romans did not need to visit this part of the world to learn the nature and significance of Greek. This language had been used in Greek colonies in the West for centuries; it was heard a great deal in the capital city itself and was quite generally spoken there by the educated classes (cp. H. Lietzmann, ‘Das Problem der Spätantike,’ SBBerlAk [1927], p. 347).³

The writings of our literature arose in this period, when the Greek language ruled over the East and many parts of the West. They were written by men who spoke the common language of communication in their day more or less colloquially. Hence, in order to understand their works, we must make ourselves familiar with that stage in the development of the Greek language which we call the ‘Koine.’ The sources from which we gain our knowledge are, in the first place, the afore-mentioned non-literary evidences (papyri, ostraca, inscriptions). But in addition to these there are a number of authors who were more or less able to avoid the spell of antiquarianism which we know as ‘Atticism’ (Polybius, Diodorus Siculus, Strabo, Plutarch, Epictetus, Artemidorus, Pseudo-Apollodorus, Vettius Valens, et al.). The representatives of Jewish Hellenism are especially important for the investigation of our literature because of the close similarity in the content of their works; included here are Philo, Josephus, the Epistle of Aristeeas, and, above all, the Septuagint, which not only contains original Greek words of the late period but also uses the contemporary tongue even when it translates. Ancient Christian writings, too, outside the scope of our literature, like the Apocryphal Acts of the Apostles and old legends,⁴ are valuable as witnesses of the colloquial common speech. Finally, the contribution of medieval and modern Greek is not to be neglected, because the Koine finds in them its lineal descendants (cp. G. N. Hatzidakis, Einleitung in die neugriechische Grammatik [1892]; A. Thumb, Handbuch der neugriechischen Volkssprache [1895; 2d ed., 1910]; A. N. Jannaris, An Historical Greek Grammar [1897]). On the basis of these sources, what conception can we gain of this common speech? Even though we recognize the Attic dialect as the main factor in its origin, that dialect had to sacrifice much to the common cause—so much, in fact, that some investigators are not willing to regard it as the main element (cp. P. Kretschmer, ‘Die Entstehung der Κοινή,’ SBWienAk 143 [1900]. For the opposite view, see Mlt. 33f). In this connection we need not chiefly call to mind the classical writers, nor regretfully note the absence of their elegance in periodic sentence structure, in the use of particles, in the employment of the moods, in the change of prepositions or negatives. The Attic had to give up the characteristics which differentiated it from all or most of the other dialects, e.g. ττ instead of σς (cp. B-D-F §34, 1), ρρ instead of ρς (cp. B-D-F §34, 2 and see ἄρσην, θαρρέω and θαρσέω), ξυν instead of συν (cp. B-D-F §34, 4). It gave up the dual altogether and used the optative very modestly. The Attic second declension ekes out a miserable existence, represented in the New Testament only by ἴλεως (q.v.); the Attic future is in process of dying out and maintains itself in the New Testament only in the case of several verbs in -ίζω, even there predominantly in quotations from the LXX (B-D-F §74, 1). The Attic ἔνεκα (q.v.) is attested unanimously only in one New Testament passage. Where, as in this case, the tradition is divided, it is impossible to escape the suspicion that scribes under the influence of Atticism have subsequently restored to classical Greek what, according to their view, presumably belonged to it [i.e., was its appropriate form, F.W.D.]. In this way the Attic future has got into some manuscripts (B-D-F §74, 1), or, for instance, the Attic forms πανδοκεῖον and πανδοκεύς force their way into the text of Lk 10:34, 35 (s. πανδοχεῖον, πανδοχεύς). Cp. W. Michaelis, ‘Der Attizismus und das NT,’ ZNW, XXII [1923], 91–121.

Just as noticeable as the losses suffered by Attic are the influences taken over from other dialects. Of Doric origin are: ἀμφιάζω (q.v.), which, together with the similarly Hellenistic form ἀμφιέζω, takes the place of the older ἀμφιέννυμι (B-D-F §73), πιάζω (q.v.) and προσαχέω (q.v.). Likewise ἀλέκτωρ (Ion-Att. ἀλεκτρυών), βουνός (q.v.), ἔναντι as well as ἀπέναντι and κατέναντι (B-D-F §214, 4), ἐνδιδύσκω (?B-D-F §73), λαός and ναός (for Att. λεώς and νεώς; cp. B-D-F §44, 1), μοιχάομαι, μαρυκάομαι (q.v.), οἰκοδομή (q.v.), ὀρκίζω (E. Fraenkel, Geschichte der griechischen nomina agentis auf -τήρ, -τωρ, -της, I [1910], 180), ὀρκωμοσία (q.v.), ὄρνιξ (q.v.). On the pass. ἐγενήθην as the aor. of γίνομαι s. that entry.

Ionic, as the dialect most closely related to Attic, offers a richer contribution. Here belong uncontracted noun forms like νεομηνία (q.v.) and ἐπασιδός; on the other side, contractions like ἱερωσύνη (Att. ἱερεωσύνη); the disappearance of the vowel before another vowel in νοσσός (for νεοσσός); [consonantal changes in] βαθμός (Att. βασμός) and κλίβανος (q.v.; Att. κρίβανος). Likewise the forms τέσσερα and τεσσεράκοντα (for τέσσαρα [q.v.] and τεσσαράκοντα [q.v.]), ἔσω (Att. εἶσω), ἔνεκεν as well as εἶνεκεν (Att. ἔνεκα), εἶπεν (Att. εἶπα, q.v. end). Further, Hellenistic Greek shares a number of verbal forms with the Ionic, e.g.: ἐλεύσομαι as future of ἔρχομαι (Att. εἶμι); ἔζησα (Att. ἐβίων); ἐκέρδησα (Att. ἐκέρδανα and ἐκέρδηνα); ἐπόθησα (Att. ἐπόθεσα); τέτευχα (Att. τετύχηκα). The Ionic may also be responsible for the inflection of -μι verbs in -ω or in -ῶ (cp. Mlt. 33). Cp. γογγύζω (q.v.); πρὶν ἢ (s. πρίν).

Most of the peculiarities of the Koine in comparison with the classical languages can be referred to no definite dialect. So it is when forms appear like εἶδα, εἶδαμεν, εἶδατε, εἶδαν (s. εἶδον); ἤνεγκα with the ptc. ἐνέγκας (s. φέρω); ἔπεσα beside ἔπεσον (s. πίπτω), in which the two aorists are mingled. Further, the imperfect with endings of the first aorist: εἶχαμεν, εἶχαν (s. ἔχω); ἔλεγαν (s. λέγω). Perf. with aorist endings (inscr. and pap. since II b.c.): ἔγνωκαν (s. γινώσκω); τετήρηκαν (J 17:6); γέγοναν (s. γίνομαι); εἶρηκαν (s. εἶπον); πέπτωκαν (s. πίπτω). The ending -σαν expands its territory and is especially noticeable in the imperfect and second aorist: εἶχον (s. ἔχω); παρελάβον (s. παραλαμβάνω); ἐξήλθον (Mk 8:11 D). Or the types of inflection in -άν and -εῖν become confused (cp. ἐλλογέω). While among Attic writers many active verbs form a middle future—at least as the regular form—the Koine insists on the active, although not quite inflexibly: ἀκούσω (s. ἀκούω); ἀμαρτήσω (Mt 18:21; cp. Hm 4, 1, 1; 2); ἀπαντήσω (Mk 14:13) and συναντήσω (Lk 22:10; Ac 20:22); ἀρπάσω (J 10:28); γελάσω (s. γελάω); κλαύσω (s. κλαίω); ῥεύσω (J 7:38). Correspondingly, it prefers the 'regular' first aorist to the second aorist, which was formerly the favorite: ἡμάρτησα (s. ἀμαρτάνω); ἐβίωσα (s. βιώω); ἐβλάστησα (s. βλαστάνω); ἔκραξα (s. κράζω). In deponents the common dialect values the aor. and fut. passive more highly than the middle: ἀπεκρίθην (s. ἀποκρίνομαι) and διεκρίθην (as aor. of the mid. διακρίνομαι; s. διακρίνω 2, mid. [= 5–6]); ἐθαυμάστην and θαυμασθήσομαι (s. θαυμάζω 2). Yet it also uses middle forms where the Attic dialect has the passive: ἡρνησάμην (s. ἀρνέομαι); διελεξάμην (s. διαλέγομαι).

Far more than its grammatical structure, the vocabulary and use of words in the Greek language suffered radical changes in the course of centuries. Instead of classical middles or deponents, the common speech employs the corresponding actives: ἀτενίζω (q.v.); εὐαγγελίζω (q.v.). Above all, however, it resorts to new formations (s. the respective articles in the lexicon), which in part take the place of related forms in more ancient times:

Of verbs in -ίζω: αἰρετίζω, αἰχμαλωτίζω, ἀνακαθίζω, ἀνεμίζω (Att. ἀνεμώω), ἀπελπίζω, ἀποθησαυρίζω, ἀποκεφαλίζω, ἀσφαλίζομαι, γαμίζω, διασκορπίζω and σκορπίζω, διαφημίζω, ἐξαρτίζω, ἐξερίζω, ἐξυπνίζω, εὐνουχίζω, ιουδαίζω, καθαρίζω (for καθαίρω), κατασοφίζομαι, κατοπτρίζω, κλυδωνίζομαι, ὀξίζω, παρορίζω and προορίζω, πελεκίζω, προελπίζω, προσεγγίζω, ῥαντίζω (for ῥαίνω), σκοτίζω, συμμερίζω.— -ιάζω: ἀγιάζω (for ἀγίζω), ἐνταφιάζω, καυστηριάζω, νηπιάζω, σεληνιάζομαι, σινιάζω.— -ματίζω (from neuters in -μα): ἀναθεματίζω and καταθεματίζω, δειγματίζω and παραδειγματίζω, δογματίζω, ἱματίζω, καυματίζω.— -άζω: ἀνετάζω, ἀποσκευάζομαι, διαυγάζω, ἐδράζω, ἐκθαυμάζω, ἐξαγοράζω, μονάζω (from μόνος), στυγνάζω (from στυγνός).— -όω: ἀκυρόω, ἀναστατόω, ἀπλόω, ἀποδεκατόω, ἀφιερóω (religious t.t.), ἀφυπνώω, ἀχρεióω, βεβηλόω, δυναμόω, ἐκρίζω, ἐνώω, ἐντυπόω, ἐξαπλόω, καθηλόω, κατιόω, καυσόω, κραταιόω (class. κρατύνω), μεταμορφóω and μορφóω, νεκρόω, προδηλόω, προσκληρόω, σαρόω (class. σαίρω), σημειóω, σπιλόω, χαριτόω.— -έω: ἀθετέω, ἀναθεωρέω, ἀναισθητέω, ἀναντλέω, ἀνομέω, ἀντιλοιδορέω, ἀντιμετρέω, ἀντοφθαλμέω, ἀποκύεω, ἀπολαλέω, ἀστοχέω, αὐθεντέω (together with αὐθέντης and αὐθεντικός), ἀφυστερέω, ἐγκακέω, εἰσκαλέομαι, ἐκδικέω, ἐκζητέω, ἐκκακέω, ἐλλογέω (commercial t.t.), ἐνείλέω, ἐξαπορέομαι, ἐξουθενέω, ἐπιχορηγέω, κατηγέω, λατομέω, συγγνωμονέω, συγκρατέω, συλλαλέω, συνομιλέω.— -άω: ἀναζάω, ἀροτριάω (for ἀρόω), δειλιάω, (ἐξ) εραυνάω (for [ἐξ] ερευνάω), λιχμάω, μηνιάω, ξυράω (q.v.), προσδαπανάω, σπαταλάω, στρηνιάω, συγχράομαι.— -εύω: αἰχμαλωτεύω, ἀκριβεύομαι, γυμνιτεύω, ἐγκρατεύομαι, ἱερατεύω, κατακυριεύω, κατασκοπεύω, κυκλεύω (for κυκλώω), μαθητεύω, μεθοδεύω, μεσιτεύω, ὀλοθρεύω, παραβολεύομαι, παροδεύω, περπερεύομαι, συμβασιλεύω, συνοδεύω, σωρεύω and ἐπισωρεύω.— Cp. also ἀνακυλίω and ἀποκυλίω, ἀναζώννυμι, ἀναθάλλω, ἀνατάσσομαι, ἀπολείχω, ἀποτάσσομαι (mid.), ἐκπλέκω, ἐπιφώσκω, καμμύω, κνήθω, κρύβω (for κρύπτω), ὁμείρομαι, ὀπτάνομαι, περιλάμπω, περιπείρω, προαμαρτάνω, προβλέπω, στήκω, χύν(ν)ω (present for χέω; B-D-F §73).

Of substantives in -μός: ἀγνισμός, ἀπαρτισμός, ἀρπαγμός, ἀφανισμός, βαπτισμός, γογγυσμός, διαλογισμός, ἐνταφιασμός, ἰλασμός, ἱματισμός, καθαρισμός, καταρτισμός, κυλισμός, μiasμός, μολυσμός, ὀνειδισμός, πειρασμός, πλατυσμός, πορισμός, συγκλεισμός, σωφρονισμός, ψιθυρισμός.— -μα (the Ionic shows a marked preference for this form): ἀγίασμα, ἀγνόημα, αἰτίωμα (for αἰτίαμα), ἀνόμημα, ἄντλημα, ἀπαύγασμα, ἀπόκριμα, γένημα, διάταγμα, ἔκτρωμα, ἐλάττωμα, ἔλιγμα, ἐνέργημα, ἔνταλμα, ἐξέραμα, θέλημα, κατάκριμα and πρόκριμα, κατάλυμα, καταπέτασμα, κατάχυμα, κατόρθωμα, κένωμα, κτίσμα, παράπτωμα, περισσευμα, πρόσκομμα, ῥάντισμα, ῥάπισμα, σέβασμα, χόρτασμα. If the ending of the stem before the suffixes -σις and -της (-τος) is short, the Koine introduces the short ending of the stem in the corresponding forms in -μα as well (B-D-F §109, 3): δόμα, θέμα, ἀνάθεμα (for the class. ἀνάθημα) and κατάθεμα, κλίμα, κρίμα, πόμα (as early as Pindar and Hdt.; the classic writers used πῶμα); see also s.v. εὔρημα and κατάστημα.— -σις: ἀθέτησις, ἄθλησις, ἀνάδειξις, ἀνάχυσις, ἀνάψυξις, ἀπάντησις, ἀποκάλυψις, ἀπολύτρωσις and λύτρωσις (technical business terms), ἀπόχρησις, βίωσις, διάταξις, ἐκδίκησις, ἐκπέτασις, ἐκπλήρωσις, ἔλεγκσις, ἔλευσις, ἐξομολόγησις and ὁμολόγησις, ἐρήμωσις, θέλησις, θλίψις, κατάκρισις, κατάνυξις, κατάρτισις, κατασκήνωσις, καύχησις, μείωσις, μόρφωσις, νέκρωσις, ὄρασις, παρατήρησις, πεποίθησις, περίθεσις, περιποίησις, προσκαρτέρησις, πρόσκλησις, σημειώσις, συζήτησις, συνειδησις, συνέλευσις.— -ότης: ἀγαθότης, ἀγιότης, ἀγνότης, ἀδελφότης, ἀδηλότης, ἀδρότης, ἀφελότης, γυμνότης, δολιότης, εἰκασιότης, θειότης, θεότης, ἰλαρότης, ἰσχυρότης, ματαιότης, μεγαλειότης, ποσότης.— -σύνη: ἀκεραισύνη, ἐλεημοσύνη; with lengthening of the o after a short syllable ἀγιωσύνη, μεγαλωσύνη.— -ία: ἀβροχία, αἰχμαλωσία, ἀμεριμνία, ἀνοδία, ἀποστασία (class. ἀπόστασις), ἀποτομία, ἀφειδία, ἀφθαρσία, ἐλαφρία, ἐπιχορηγία, ἐτοιμασία, κατοικία, λυχνία (for λυχνεῖον), μετοικεσία, ὀπτασία, παραχειμασία, πρωΐα, σκοτία (for σκοτός), συνοδία.— -εία: ἐριθεία, ἱερατεία, λογεία, μαθητεία, μεθοδεία, περισσεία, προφητεία.— -εια: ἀπώλεια, ἀρέσκεια, ἐκτένεια.— -ή: ἀρμογή, βροχή and ἐμβροχή, διαταγή and ἐπιταγή, ἐγκοπή, κοπή, προκοπή, προσκοπή and συγκοπή, κατ' ἐξοχήν, ἐπισκοπή, μηλωτή, ὀφειλή, πεισμονή, περιοχή, προσευχή.— -της (agent nouns): ἀποστάτης, βαπτιστής, βιαστής, γνώστης, διωγμότης, ἐξορκιστής, καθηγητής, καταφρονητής, μεριστής, μεσίτης, προσαίτης, προσκυνητής, σαλπιστής, στασιαστής, συμμύστης, χρεώστης, ψιθυριστής.— -ωρ: ἀντιλήπτωρ, κατήγωρ, κτήτωρ.— -ων: ἀμπελών, ἐλαιών, καύσων, κοιτών, λαμπηδών, νυμφών, πυλών.— -τήριον: ἀγνευτήριον, ἀκροατήριον, ἰλαστήριον (religious t.t.).—The feminine forms βασίλισσα (q.v.) and Συροφοινίκισσα are Hellenistic, also μοιχαλὶς, συγγενίς, μαθήτρια and some diminutives, whose actual diminutive force is no longer felt in many cases; animals: ἐρίφιον, ὄναριον (ἀρνίον, ἰχθύδιον, κυνάριον, προβάτιον are taken over from the older language); parts of the body: ὠτίον and ὠτάριον. Cp. ἀγρίδιον, βιβλίδιον (βιβλαρίδιον and βιβλιδάριον), κλινίδιον (κλινάριον is older), κοράσιον, νησίον, πτερύγιον, ῥαβδίον, ψωμίον.—Formations in -ιον that are not diminutive: γεώργιον, δοκίμιον, δυσεντέριον, ὀψώνιον, προαύλιον, προσφάγιον, συμβούλιον, τελώνιον, ὑποπόδιον.—Finally, a large group of nouns, like ἀγάπη, ἄρκος (for ἄρκτος), βασιλίσκος, βραβείον, βυρσεύς, γρόνθος, καταγγελεύς, καταιγίς, κειρία, κρύπτη, κύθρα, λατόμος, λειτουργός, ληνός, μάμμη, μύλος (for μύλη), νίκος (for νίκη), ὁδηγός, περικεφαλαία, πινακίς, πλήμμουρα, πολιὰ, ῥομφαία, σαγήνη, σκύβαλον, σπίλος, στρήνος, συγκληρονόμος (legal t.t.), συμπολίτης (in one passage in Euripides), σύνοδος, ταμείον (for ταμείον).

Of adjectives in -ιος: ἐπιθανάτιος, ἐπιούσιος (q.v.), μετακόσμιος, παρόδιος, περιούσιος, σεβάσιμος.— -ικός (-ιακός): ἀγγελικός, αἰρετικός, ἀνατολικός, ἀρσενικός, ἀρχοντικός, αὐθεντικός, δαιμονικός, διδακτικός, ἐθνικός, καθολικός, κυριακός, λαϊκός, λειτουργικός, λογικός (a philosophical t.t. Aristot.+), νεωτερικός, οἰκιακός, ὀνικός, προβατικός, προφητικός, σαρκικός, σηρικός, χοϊκός.— -ινος: ἀμαράντινος, δερμάτινος, καθημερινός, καρπάσινος, κόκκινος, μύλινος, ὀρθρινός, ὀστράκινος, πρωϊνός, ταχινός.— -τος: ἀρκετός, δεκτός, διαβόητος, ἔκπληκτος, ἐπήλυτος, ἐπιπόθητος and ποθητός, κατάκριτος, οἰκοδομητός, παθητός, σεβαστός, σιτιστός.— Cp. also γραῶδης, ἔγγραφος, ἔκτρομος and ἔντρομος, ἐνάρετος (Stoic t.t.), ἔξυπνος, ἐπάλληλος, ἐπίμονος, ἥρεμος, θηλυκός, πρόσκαιρος, σύμμορφος, σύμψυχος, σύνδενδρος, ὕπανδρος.— Double comparison for the purpose of attaining greater clarity is occasionally found in classical times (Kühner-Bl. I 373), and becomes very popular with Hellenistic writers (B-D-F §61, 2; Mlt. 236; Mayser I 301, 1; Crönert 190): διπλότερος (s. διπλοῦς), ἐλαχιστότερος (s. ἐλάχιστος, beg.), μειζότερος (s. μέγας, beg.).

In general, it becomes a very common custom to put new life into certain forms that show the wear and tear of time—that is, have become indistinct in meaning—by compounding them with other words. This explains in part the preference of the Koine for compounds, of which the previous lists exhibit a considerable number, even in the simplest speech. Where the older language does very well with a simple form, Hellenistic Greek likes to prefix a preposition (cp. G. B. Winer's five reports [Programme], De verborum cum prae-positis compositorum in Novo Testamento usu [Leipzig, 1834–43]): ἀνανήφω and ἐκνήφω, ἀνατρέφομαι, ἀποδεκατεύω, ἀποτυφλώ, ἀποφθέγγομαι, διανεύω, διανυκτερεύω, διερμηνεύω and μεθερμηνεύω, ἐγκαυχάομαι, ἐγχερίω, ἐκλιπαρέω, ἐκπειράζω, ἐναγκαλίζομαι, ἐνδοξάζομαι, ἐνορκίζω, ἐξακολουθέω and κατακολουθέω, ἐξηχέω, ἐξισχύω, ἐξομολογέω, ἐπαγωνίζομαι, ἐπαθροίζω, ἐπιβαρέω and καταβαρέω, ἐπιπορεύομαι, ἐπισκηνώ, ἐπισπουδάζω (?q.v.), ἐπισφραγίζω, καταντάω, καταπιστεύω, παραβιάζομαι, προσεγγίζω, προσονομάζω.— ἐπίγνωσις.— ἀπόκενος, περίπικρος.— ἔκπαλαι, ἐπαύριον, ὑπεράγαν, ὑπεράνω, ὑπερεκπερισσοῦ, ὑπερλίαν, ὑπερπερισσῶς.

Compare also the great number of multiple compounds, by which the classical store of such forms is increased (cp. A. Rieder, 'Die mit mehr als einer Präposition zusammengesetzten Verba [und überhaupt Wörter] des N [und A] T', Programm Gumbinnen [1876]): ἀντιδιατίθημι, ἀντιπαρέρχομαι, ἀπεκδέχομαι, ἀπεκδύομαι, ἐμπεριπατέω, ἐπαναπαύομαι, ἐπανατρέχω, ἐπενδύομαι, ἐπιδιορθώω, ἐπισυνάγω, καταδιαίrew, παρεισέρχομαι, παρεκφέρω, παρενθυμέομαι, παρεπιδημέω, προεπαγγέλλω and προκαταγγέλλω, συγκατανεύω, συγκαταψήφίζομαι, συναντιλαμβάνομαι, συνεπέρχομαι, συνεπιμαρτυρέω, συνυποκρίνομαι.— διαπαρτριβή, ἐγκατάλειμμα, ἐπισυναγωγή, ἐπισύστασις, συγκατάθεσις.— ἐπικατάρατος, παρείσακτος, παρεπιδημος, συνέκδημος.

But the common speech uses various other combinations as well. Verbal adjectives, with α- privative prefixed: ἀδιάκριτος, ἀδιάλειπτος, ἀκατάγνωστος, ἀκατακάλυπτος, ἀκατάληπτος, ἀκατάλυτος, ἀκατάπαυστος, ἀκατάστατος (also ἀκαταστατέω and ἀκαταστασία), ἀκατάσχετος, ἀλάλητος, ἀμάραντος, ἀμετάθετος, ἀμετανόητος, ἀναντίρρητος, ἀναπάρτιστος, ἀναπολόγητος, ἀνεκκλήτος, ἀνέκλειπτος, ἀνεξιχνίαστος, ἀνεπαίσχυντος, ἀνυπόκριτος, ἀνυπότακτος, ἀπαράβατος, ἀπερινόητος, ἀπερίσπαστος, ἀπρόσιτος, ἄσχυλος, ἀστήρικτος, ἀστομάχης, ἀσύγκριτος, ἄτρεπτος, ἄφθαρτος, ἄψευστος, ἀψηλάφητος (cp. also ἄδρανής, ἄθεσμος, ἀμέριμνος, ἀπροσδεής, ἀπρόσκοπος, ἄσπιλος, ἄτονος);—with δυσ- prefixed: δυσβάστακτος, δυσερμηνευτος, δυσνόητος;—with εὖ- prefixed: εὐάρεστος (also εὐάρεστέω and εὐάρεστησις), εὐλογητός, εὐμετάδοτος, εὐοι-κονόμητος, εὐπρόσδεκτος, εὐσυνείδητος (cp. other combinations with εὖ- in the Koine: εὐδοκέω and συνευδοκέω, εὐδόκησις, εὐδοκία, εὐκαιρέω, εὐκοπος, εὐλάλος, εὐποιῖα, εὐπροσωπέω, εὐστάθεια, εὐσταθέω, εὐψυχέω);—with a noun prefixed: θεόπνευστος, πατροπαράδοτος, ποταμοφόρητος.

Compounds of various other kinds: ἀγαθοποιέω and ἀγαθοποιός, ἀλεκτοροφωνία, ἄλλογενής, ἀμνησίκακος, ἀνθρωπόμορφος, ἀργυροκόπος, ἀρσενοκοίτης, ἀρτιγέννητος, ἀρχάγγελος, ἀρχέγονος, ἀρχιποίμην, ἀρχισυνάγωγος, ἀρχιτρίκλινος, αὐτοκατάκριτος, γαζοφυλάκιον, γονυπετέω, δεσμοφύλαξ, διετία, διθάλαστος, δικαιοκρισία, δικαιοπραγία, δωροφορία, ἐθνάρχης, ἐτερόγλωστος, ἐτερογνώμων, ἡδύοσμον, ἡμιθανής, ἡμίξηρος, θεομάχος (θεομαχέω is older), θεοπρεπής, θεοσεβέω (θεοσεβεία and θεοσεβής are older), θυμομαχέω, ιεροουργέω, ισάγγελος, ισότιμος, ισχυροποιέω, κακουχέω, καλοποιέω, κενοδοξέω, κενοδοξία and κενόδοξος, κενόσπουδος, κενοφωνία, κοινωφελής, κοσμοκράτωρ, κωμόπολις, λειποτακτέω, λιθοβολέω, μακροθυμία, μακροθυμέω and μακρόθυμος, μακροχρόνιος, ματαιολογία and ματαιολόγος, ματαιοπονία, μεγαλο(ρ) ρημονέω and μεγαλο(ρ) ρημοσύνη, μεσουράνημα, μετριοπαθέω, μογιλάλος, νεκροφόρος, νυχθήμερον, οἰκοδεσπότης and οἰκοδεσποτέω, οἰνόμελι, ὀλοκληρία (ὀλόκληρος is older), ὀλοτελής, ὀροθεσία, πανάρετος, πάνσεμνος, παντεπόπτης, παντοκράτωρ, πληροφορία (πληροφορέω is earlier, in isolated cases), πολιτάρχης, πολύτιμος, πρωτότοκος, ῥαδιοῦργημα, σαρκόνυξ, σιτομέτριον, στενοχωρέω, συλαγωγέω, υἱοθεσία, φιλαργυρέω (also ἀφιλάργυρος, whereas φιλάργυρος is attested even earlier), φίλαυτος, φιλήδονος, φιλόθεος, φιλοπρωτεύω, φρεναπάτης, χειραγωγέω and χειραγωγός, χειρόγραφον, χρεοφειλέτης. Cp. also the contractions κάκει, κάκειθεν, κάκεινος, κάκεισε.

Adverbs of Hellenistic Greek: ἀντιπέρα; ἀπέναντι, ἔναντι and κατέναντι (Doric; see p. xv above); ἐνώπιον, ἐξάπιννα, ἐφάπαξ, καθά, καθώς, καθεξῆς, μακρόθεν, παιδιόθεν, παμπληθεί, πανοικεί, πάντοτε, ῥητῶς, ῥοιζηδόν, ὑπέρ (q.v. 3 [= C]).—Adjectival comparison of adverbs: ἐξώτερος, ἐσώτερος, κατώτερος. Another way in which a language can be made more expressive is by adopting foreign words. The Koine had demonstrably incorporated many such terms, now found in our literature, before the New Testament period: ἀγγαρεύω, ἀσσάριον, βαῖον, βύσσος, γάζα, δηνάριον, εὐρακύλων, θριαμβεύω, Καῖσαρ, καλάνδαι, καμάρα, κεντυρίων, κερβικάριον, κήνσος, κολωνία, κουστωδία, κράβατος, κύμινον, λεγιών, λέντιον, λιβερτίνος, λίτρα, μάκελλον [but see this entry, AG], μίλιον, μόδιος, νάρδος, ξέστης(?), πραιτώριον, σάκκος, σάφειρος, στατίων, συκάμινος, φαίλωνης [but see this entry also, AG]. The same may confidently be assumed of not a few others: ἄκκεπτα, δεπόσιτα, δεσέρτωρ, ἐξεμπλάριον, ζιζάνιον, καρούχα, κοδράντης, κομφέκτωρ, μεμβράνα, ῥέδη, σικάριος, σιμικίνθιον, σουδάριον, σπεκουλάτωρ, συμψέλιον, τίτλος, φραγέλλιον and φραγελλώ, χώρος (q.v. II).

The words quoted above are clearly shown by secular witnesses to be a part of the Hellenistic vocabulary (s. B-D-F §5, 1). Naturally, it is possible that some of them were used in more ancient times, as in the case of θριαμβεύω, used by Ctesias.

A language improves not only through new formations and the appropriation of foreign words but also through the process by which terms which have long been available develop new possibilities of usage. Much-used words acquire a new meaning beside the older one and sometimes repress the earlier meaning or even exclude it altogether. The change often consists in the rise of specialized or technical terms: ἀδελφός as a member of a religious community (s. ἀδελφός 2); ἀνακλίνω = to cause to recline at table (s. ἀνακλίνω 1b [= 2]); ἀναπίπτω = lie down, viz. at a meal (s. ἀναπίπτω 1); ἀναστροφή (q.v.) = way of life; ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι = notice (q.v. 2 [= 3]); ἀντιλέγω = oppose (q.v. 2); ἀντίλημψις = help (q.v.); ἀπαρτίζω = accomplish

(q.v.); ἀπέχω as a commercial t.t. (q.v. 1); ἀποκόπτω = emasculate (q.v. 2 [= a]); ἀποτάσσω in the middle (q.v. 1; 2); ἀρετή = a demonstration of divine power, miracle (q.v. 3 [= 2]); ἄριστον = noon meal, or meal in general (q.v. 2); ἄρτι of the present time in general (q.v. 3); τὴν ἀρχὴν = at all (s. ἀρχή 1b [= 1a]); αὐτάρκεια = contentment, a t.t. of the Cynic-Stoic teaching concerning virtue (q.v. 2); βαρύτιμος = very expensive; βίος = way of life (q.v. 2 [= 1]); γενέσια = birthday celebration (q.v.); δαιμόνιον and δαίμων = evil spirit; δαιμονίζομαι = be possessed by an evil spirit; διαθήκη exclusively = last will and testament; διάκονος as a cult t.t.; διαπονέομαι = be angry; δύναμις = personal supernatural being (q.v. 6 [= 5]); δῶμα = roof; ἐμβατεύω as a t.t. of the mystery religions (q.v. 4); ἐμβλέπω = observe with the eyes of the spirit (q.v. 2); ἐμβριμάομαι = scold (q.v.); ἐπαγγελία = promise; ἐπιθυμητής in the bad sense; ἐπιστρέφομαι = be converted (s. ἐπιστρέφω 2b [= 4b]); ἐπιτιμάω = punish (q.v. 2); ἐπιφάνεια, of the process by which the hidden divinity becomes visible; ἐπόπτης as a t.t. of the mysteries; ἐρεύγομαι = proclaim; ἐρωτάω = request; εὐαγγέλιον = good news, occasionally with a religious tinge (s. εὐαγγέλιον and cp. εὐαγγελιστής); εὐσχήμων = distinguished, of high repute; εὐχαριστέω = give thanks, sometimes to a deity (q.v. 2); θυρεός = a shield (large as a door); κεφαλὴ = book in the form of a scroll; κοίμησις of death (q.v. 2); κρύσταλλος = rock crystal; λαλία no longer exclusively in the bad sense; λειτουργέω and derivatives, of religious service; μάρμαρος = marble; μέθος of males; μνημεῖον = grave (q.v. 2); νήφω in the metaphorical sense; ὀψάριον = fish; παρακαλέω = request (q.v. 3); παρουσία in the technical sense (q.v. 2b); παρρησία = frankness, joyousness (q.v. 3ab); περισπάω = occupy fully (q.v. 2); πήρα = beggar's knapsack (q.v.); πλῆθος = community (q.v. 2bδ); πνεῦμα and ψυχή as contrasting terms (s. πνευματικός 2aγ); ποιμήν as a religious t.t. (q.v. 2bγ); πρεσβύτερος as the designation of an official (q.v. 2b); πτώμα = corpse; πύργος = farm or business building (q.v. 2); ρύμη = street; σεβάζομαι of religious reverence; σταυρώω = crucify; στέγω = endure; στενοχωρία in the metaphorical sense; στόμαχος = stomach; συνίστημι = show, prove (q.v. 1c [= A3]); σχολή = school; φθάνω = arrive (q.v. 2).

A considerable number of older words have been appropriated as technical terms from the Roman civil and military administration: ἀπογραφή = census; ἑκατόνταρχος (ἑκατοντάρχης) = centurio; ἑπαρχος = praefectus; ἐπίτροπος = procurator; ἡγεμῶν and ἡγεμονεύειν of the imperial governor; ῥαβδούχος = lictor; σεβαστός = Augustus; σπείρα = cohors; στρατηγοί = duumviri coloniae; στρατόπεδον = legio; χιλιάρχος = tribunus militum; κράτιστος = vir egregius; τὸ ἱκανὸν ποιεῖν τινι = satisfacere alicui; λαμβάνειν τὸ ἱκανόν = satis accipere (s. ἱκανός 1c [= 1]). Other terms of this kind appear for the first time in the Hellenistic period: ἀνθύπατος = proconsul (cp. ἀνθυπατεύειν); ἐπαρχεία and ἡ ἐπάρχειος = provincia (from the older ἑπαρχος).

We have yet to consider those words which our literature, primarily the New Testament, either shares with the LXX alone, or for which it is the only witness, and which for this reason play a unique role as 'voces biblicae' in the philology of the Greek Bible. Before the systematic investigation of the popular speech, their number was much larger. The fact that the advances in our knowledge have freed one after another of these words from their isolation and demonstrated that they were part of the living language forces upon us the conclusion that the great mass of biblical words for which we do not yet have secular evidence also belong to that language.⁵ Of course, there are some formations with regard to which it is not only possible, but in some instances very probable, that the translators of the Old Testament formed them for their own purposes and then handed them on to the composers of our literature, while the latter, in turn, created other terms to satisfy their own needs. The Hellenistic spirit, however, makes itself felt even in these cases through the fact that those forms are preferred for which we have been able to establish a preference in the common speech. Here belong, for instance, ἀγαλλιάομαι and ἀγαλλίασις,⁶ ἀγιασμός, αἴνεσις, ἀλίσγημα, ἄλλοτριεπίσκοπος, ἀνθρωπαρεσκέω and ἀνθρωπάρεσκος, ἀνταπόδομα and ἀνταποδότης, ἀντιμισθία, ἀξιαγάπητος and other combinations with ἄξιος in Ignatius, ἀποκαταλλάσσω, ἐθελοθρησκία, ἑτεροδιδασκαλέω, ἑτεροζυγέω, θεοδρόμος, θεομακάριστος, θεομακαρίτης, θεοπρεσβευτής, θυσιαστήριον, κακοδιδασκαλία, καλοδιδάσκαλος, καρδιογνώστης, κατακληρονομέω, λυτρωτής, μισθαποδοσία and μισθαποδότης, νομοδιδάσκαλος, ὀλιγοπιστία and ὀλιγόπιστος, ὀλοθρευτής, ὀφθαλμοδουλία, πατριάρχης, πολυσπλαγχνία and πολὺσπλαγχνος, πρεσβύτεριον, πρωτοκαθεδρίτης, σκανδαλίζω and σκάνδαλον, σκληροκαρδία, σπλαγχνίζομαι, ψευδάδελφος, ψευδοδιδασκαλία and ψευδοδιδάσκαλος, ψευδοπροφήτης.

Likewise it is certain that there are specific expressions for biblical or Jewish or primitive Christian things which, like the things they denote, are limited to the Old Testament (and Jewish writers influenced by it) and our literature (together with the Christian writings dependent on it): ἀκροβυστία and ἀκρόβυστος, ἀντίχριστος, ἀπερίτμητος, ἀποσυνάγωγος, βάπτισμα, ἐγκαίνια, εἰδωλεῖον, εἰδωλόθυτος; εἰδωλολατρία, εἰδωλολατρέω, εἰδωλολάτρης; κατείδωλος, μοσχοποιέω, ὀλοκαύτωμα, χριστέμπορος, χριστομαθία, χριστόνομος, ψευδαπόστολος, ψευδόχριστος.

In the case of most of the words found only in the LXX and our literature, it is highly improbable that they originated in Jewish or early Christian circles. This is, at any rate, a totally unwarranted assumption when secular speech exhibits closely related forms and there is nothing specifically Jewish or early Christian or even religious about these 'biblical' words. Due allowance must be made for the chance which has preserved one word while allowing another to disappear. It is pure accident that προσευχή = prayer, so common in the LXX and our literature, has come to light in only one pagan papyrus. If this had not turned up, we would have had another 'vox biblica.' Why should παροιμία be 'biblical' when πάροιχος in the same sense is quite common? Who would be so rash as to deduce a rule from the fact that καταλιθάζω is found only in Christian writers, while in the LXX it is καταλιθοβολέω, and in secular writers καταλιθόω?

In my judgment, the following 'biblical words,' for example, belong to the common language: ἀγαθωσύνη, ἀδιαφθορία, ἀκρογωνιαίος, ἀνακαίνωσις, ἀπάρτισμα, ἀπελεγμός, ἀποδεκατόω, ἀποκαρδοκία, ἀφθορία, ἀφιλάγαθος, γόγγυσος and γογγυστής, διενθυμέομαι, διώκτης, ἐδραίωμα, εἰρηνοποιέω, ἐκμυκτηρίζω, ἐλεγμός, ἐμπαίγμων and ἐμπαίκτης, ἐπιδιατάσσομαι, ἐπικαταλλάσσομαι, ἐπιπόθησις

⁶ There are no secular occurrences of ἀγαλλίασις. The reference to Ps.-Callisthenes in Liddell-Scott is based on the inadequate edition of C. Muller (1846), where it is found at the end of 2, 22. In the oldest form attainable of the Historia Alex. Mag. of Ps.-Callisthenes, prepared by W. Kroll in 1926, the word is found nowhere, not even in the apparatus. It belongs, evidently, to one of the many later reworkings of the original text of Ps.-Callisthenes. But this reworking obviously took place under biblical influence. In addition to other things, 2, 42 (which also is omitted in Kroll) has Alexander say: εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν παρήμην γῆν. Οἵτινες (οἱ ἐκεῖσε) ζῶντι θεῷ ἔδοξαν λατρεύειν, ὃς ἐμὲ ἐποίησε πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἀγαθὴν ἔχειν γνώμην. καὶ ὅλη μου ἡ ψυχὴ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἦν.... Κάκεισε [in Alexandria] πάντας τοὺς θεοὺς ἐξουθένισα, ὡς οὐκ ὄντας θεοὺς. τὸν δὲ ἐπὶ τῶν Σεραφίμ θεὸν ἀνεκήρυξα.

[q.v.] and ἐπιποθία, εὐνουχία, ἥττημα, ἱεράτευμα, καταλαλιά, κατοικητήριον, κερματιστής, κρυσταλλίζω, λαξευτός, λογομαχέω, ματαίωμα, μέθυσμα, ὀξυχολία, ὀρθοποδέω, ὀρθοτομέω, ὀχλοποιέω, παγιδεύω, παιδοφθορέω, παραπικραίνω and παραπικρασμός, παραφρονία, παροργισμός, προενάρχομαι, πρόσχυσις, ραντισμός, σινιάζω, συζητητής, φρεναπατάω, φυλακίζω.

More important than the appearance of newly formed words is the fact that our literature, sometimes following the LXX, sometimes apart from it, uses many words of the older or even of the common Greek in new meanings: τὰ ἄζυμα (s. ἄζυμος 1 [= 2]); ἀνάθεμα (q.v. 2); ἀναφέρω as a t.t. of sacrificial practice (q.v. 2 [= 3]); ἀπαρχή of a first convert (q.v. 2 [= 1b]); ἀποκαλύπτω of divine revelations of every possible kind; ἀπόστολος as t.t. (q.v. 3 [= 2c]); βαπτίζω = baptize (q.v. 2); δέησις exclusively = prayer; διάβολος = devil (q.v. 2); διασπορά (q.v.); ἐπισκέπτομαι of a visitation of divine grace (q.v. 3); ἐπισκοπή = visitation and = office of overseer (q.v. 2 and 3 [= 1 and 2]); εὐλογέω and εὐλογία in the sense of 'blessing' and 'consecrating'; κιβωτός = ark and = ark of the covenant; μάρτυς = martyr (q.v. 3); μετάνοια with definite religious coloring; παιδεύω = discipline, punish (q.v. 2); παράδεισος (q.v.); παρασκευή = day of preparation; παρουσία of the coming of Christ (q.v. 2b); πεντηκοστή = Pentecost; προσήλυτος as a t.t.; σκηνή (τοῦ μαρτυρίου); φυλακτήριον = phylactery; χήρα as a t.t. (q.v. 2 [= b]).—Cp. also the words used by Christian piety with a connotation of its own, like δικαιοῦω and πιστεύω together with their derivatives; πνεῦμα, χάρις and the like.³⁵

Sometimes it is plainly Hebrew influence which gives special meaning to words and expressions in the LXX and our literature. τὰ ἔθνη = 'the heathen, Gentiles' comes about when that plural form is used to translate עַמִּים, a rendering that was more natural for the translators of the LXX, because among the Greeks it had become customary to call foreigners ἔθνη (s. ἔθνος 2). πρόσωπον λαμβάνειν is לָקַח , לָקַח and there are found in our literature in addition to this expression (borrowed from the LXX) the forms προσωπολημπτέω, προσωπολήμπτης, and προσωπολημψία (s. πρόσωπον 1b and cp. there under b–e [= a and b] still other OT expressions using πρόσωπον). Cp. ῥῆμα = thing (q.v. 2); ῥίζα = root-shoot, sprout (q.v. 2); σάκκος = mourning garment; πᾶσα σάρξ (s. σάρξ 3 [= 3a]); στόμα μαχαίρης (s. στόμα 2 [= 4]); υἱός with a genitive of the thing, like υἱός γεέννης (s. υἱός 1cδ [= 2cβ]). Cp. also τέκνον (q.v. 2f [= 5]).

The Semitic coloring is especially plain where Hebrew and Aramaic words or expressions, Hellenized or not, appear as a foreign element: ἀλληλουῖα, ἀμήν, βάτος = bath [Hebrew measure], γέεννα, κόρος, μάννα, πᾶσχα, Σαβαώθ, σάββατον, σατάν and σατανᾶς, σάτον, σίκερα, ὕσσωπος, ὠσαννά.

A special place must be accorded those expressions which originated not in the Old Testament but in the Aramaic basis of the gospel tradition or from the religious language of the primitive community: ἀββᾶ, ἐλωῖ, ἐφφαθά, κορβάν and κορβανᾶς, λαμά, μαμωνᾶς, μαρὰν ἀθά, ῥαββί, ῥαββουνί, ῥαβιθά (q.v.), ῥακά, σαβαχθαίνι, ταλιθα κούμ.

Spoken Jewish-Greek as an entity to be clearly differentiated from the language of the people in general is something that can rarely be established, though more often suspected (cp. B-D-F §4, 3). As for the influence of the LXX, every page of this lexicon shows that it outweighs all other influences on our literature. In the body of the work will also be found references to the important recent literature for lexicographical investigations, as occasion requires. Cp. also U. von Wilamowitz[-Moellendorff], Geschichte der griechischen Sprache (1928).

It is the purpose of this lexicon to facilitate the understanding of the texts that were composed in the late Greek described above. This kind of Greek was the mother-tongue of those who wrote them (C. C. Torrey, The Four Gospels [1933], 243; G. Björck, Hv Διδασκων [1940], 123f), no matter how well they may have been acquainted with Semitic idiom. Likewise, those who heard and read their messages spoke the same kind of Greek. They, at least, were no longer conscious of Semitic originals upon which, in one form or another, some of those writings were based. With regard to the authors, too, we do well to maintain a cautious reserve on this question, since the solution of the problem of Semitic influence⁷ is burdened with so much uncertainty at the present time (s. Björck, loc. cit.).⁸ We shall do well to have recourse to Semitic originals only in cases where the Greek of our literature either cannot be understood from the background of the contemporary language at all or at least not sufficiently well.

In the Greek world to which the early Christian writings belong there were not only gentile literary men, but Jewish authors as well; this fact militates against the unity of later Greek literature at a point that is important for its understanding. We are incomparably better informed concerning the language of Hellenistic Judaism than we are about its gentile counterpart. How easy it is, comparatively speaking, to gain a conception of the language of the LXX, Philo, and the Epistle of Aristeeas, of the Greek Enoch and the Testaments of the 12 Patriarchs! Because of the work already done, we can learn a good deal about Ps.-Phocylides and Josephus without too great an expenditure of time. These works comprise the greater part of the available sources. On the other hand, for gentile writers we must depend on chance references in the lexicons, on sections from the ancient gatherers of annotations that have survived in literature, and what modern studies⁹ have contributed to New Testament philology or to the Koine. This means that we are comparing two entities, which, when viewed together, must present a distorted picture; only the one can be seen in its proper dimensions, while the other has been woefully retarded in its development. It is all too easy to yield to the inclination to assume that Jewish influence is present, when, in reality, a typical Greek sentiment may be expressed in a Jewish-Greek source. In this case we can bring about a greater degree of equality by giving gentile Greek literature more of a chance to speak for itself than it has had in the past.

This will serve to indicate the general direction in which the third and fourth editions [of Bauer's Wörterbuch] have departed from the second. Yet, as is easy to understand, only a beginning has been made so far. Systematic, connected reading of secular Greek literature can and must bring to light with still greater clarity its relation to Greek used by the earliest Christians. A few observations, made while the fourth edition was in process of being published, but too late to be included in it, may serve to demonstrate how far even the latest edition is from being exhaustive in this respect, and how far removed it is from forcing upon a (possible) collaborator the unwanted role of mere gleaner in this wide field. This or that item submitted here may contribute a little to an understanding of pertinent facts. Yet how important is this result, too, when we wish to know what effect our literature produced on people who were thoroughly steeped in pagan thought, feeling, and custom!

⁷ For references on this subject see B-D-F §4.

⁹ Because of their fragmentary character, these studies are only partly available even to those who industriously seek them out.

The following linguistic phenomena, not included in the fourth edition, are to be found in non-Christian Greek literature:

αἰσχρολογία = 'obscene speech,' Diod. S. 5, 4, 7; αἰσχροός = 'obscene,' Ps.-Demetr., Eloc. 151.

βιβλίδιον = 'letter,' Polyaeus 7, 33, 1.

γένος (1 at Rv 22:16) τινός of a single offspring: Hom.; Soph., Ant. 1117; esp. Epimenides [VI b.c.] no. 457 fgm. 3 Jac. ἐγὼ (Musaeus) γένος εἰμὶ Σελήνης. ἐγείρω (1aγ [= 10] τὸν λίθον = 'lift' or 'move a stone from its place': Seleucus of Alexandria [I a.d.] no. 341 fgm. 4 Jac.

εἰμί (I 5 [= 5]) the short clause of J 10:22 is like Polyaeus 7, 44, 2 πόλεμος ἦν. ἐκλείπω Lk 22:32 of faith: 'fail, die out.' So Plut., Lyc. 31, 8 of a race of men. ἐλπίζω (1 [= 1a]) τὰ ἐλπιζόμενα: Polyaeus 3, 9, 11.

θηρεύω 'go on a hunting expedition' after statements of someone, in order to use them against him: Pla., Gorg. 489b ὀνόματα θηρεύειν ... ἐάν τις ῥήματι ἀμάρτη.

ἴδε (4 [= 4a]) 'hear': schol. on Pla. 130c Ἀλκιβιάδης, ἴδε, τί λέγει.

καταπατέω (1b on Lk 12:1) Polyaeus 4, 3, 21 ὑπ' ἀλλήλων καταπατούμενοι. κέραμος (2 on Lk 5:19) = 'roof-tile': Pausanias 1, 13, 8.

κρίνω (4aα [= 5aα]) κρίνομαι ἐπὶ τινος = 'be judged before someone': schol. on Hes., Op. 9.

μαρτυρία (2c, end [= 3]) God's 'good testimony': Dio Chrys. 16 [33], 12 τῆς μεγίστης ἔτυχε μαρτυρίας παρὰ τοῦ δαιμονίου.

μάρτυς (2c) of a man as a witness for a divine message: Epict. 3, 24, 112f; 3, 26, 28.

ὁμολογέω (5 [= 4c]) τινί 'praise someone': Dio Chrys. 10 [11], 147.

πόσος (1) πόσῳ foll. by comp.: Polyaeus 3, 9, 25 πόσῳ ἡμεῖς ἐκείνοις φοβερώτεροι;

ρίζω (end) ριζοῦσθαι ἐν = 'be firmly rooted in': Nicander, Theriaca 183.

ὑδρία λιθίνη J 2:6: Athen. 13, 589b.

χωλός symbolically: Pla., Leg. 1, 634a; Plut., Cim. 16, 10.

Other characteristics which appeared in the fourth edition as Jewish peculiarities have now been found in pagan sources:

ἅγιος (1ba [= 1aβ8]) of a pagan: Ramsay, CB I/2, 386 no. 232, 8 Γάιος, ὡς ἅγιος, ὡς ἁγαθός.

ἀθλητής fig. as early as Gorgias (E. Scheel, De Gorgianae disciplinae vestigiis [diss., Rostock, 1890], p. 13). Also Dio Chrys. 2, 18.

ἀκοή (1b [= 2]) ἀκούω occurs in the New Testament only as a quot. from the Old Testament but can hardly be called a 'reproduction of the Hebrew,' since it is also found in Polyaeus, Exc. 55, 2.

ἀποχωρέω = 'fall away, desert': Sb 7835 [I b.c.] the cult brotherhood of Zeus Hypsistos forbids its members to desert the (monarchic) ἡγούμενος, to whom they all owe obedience, and thus to cause σχίσματα.

ἀρνέομαι (3d [= 3e]) = 'deny, reject,' with a thing as object: Lycophron 348. διάκονος (2 [= 1 and 2]) as fem.: Epict. 3, 7, 28; 2, 23, 8.

εἰσακούω (2a) = 'hear, grant' of God: Quintus Smyrnaeus 12, 154.

ἐκχέω (1 [= 1b], at Ac 1:18) of the entrails: Quintus Smyrnaeus 8, 302; 9, 190. ἐξέρχομαι ἔξω τινός (s.v. ἔξω 2b) Polyaeus 3, 7, 3.

ἐπιστρέφειν (2b [= 4b]) πρὸς τινα = 'turn to someone': Diog. L. 3, 25.

ἡσυχάζω (4 [= 3]) = 'have rest': Diog. L. 3, 21.

κάμνω (3) = 'die': Crinagoras [I b.c.–I a.d.] 25, 1 [ed. M. Rubensohn (1888)] καμῶσιν ὡς ζῶσις 'for dead as well as for living'; Dionys. Byz. [200 a.d.] §109; 110 [ed. R. Güngerich (1927)]; Kaibel 321, 8.

καρδία (1bβ) as the seat of the intellect, as early as an 'ancient poet,' perhaps Hesiod: fgm. 247 Rzach.

κρίμα (2) = 'decree': Explor. arch. de la Galatie etc. [= IGal], G. Perrot et al. I [1872], inscr. no. 25 [II a.d.].

λύτρον ὑπέρ τινος Lucian, Dial. Deor. 4, 2.

λύω (2a) τι ἀπό τινος at Lk 13:15: Quintus Smyrnaeus 4, 373.

μανθάνω (1) w. inf. foll.: Aristoxenus [300 b.c.] fgm. 96 [ed. F. Wehrli (1945)].

μανθάνω (4 [= 3]) at Hb 5:8: schol. on Pla. 222b ἐάν μὴ πάθῃς, οὐ μὴ μάθῃς. μέφομαι (end) at Ro 9:19 'find fault, complain': Ps.-Pla., Axiochus 7, 368a.

νεφέλη as a medium for snatching a person away as Ac 1:9; 1 Th 4:17; better parallels than those quoted from Josephus are to be found: Dosiadas [III b.c.] no. 458 fgm. 5 Jac. νέφος ἤρπασεν αὐτὸν (Ganymede) εἰς οὐρανόν; Ps.-Apollodorus 2, 7, 7, 12 (Heracles).

οἰκία (3) = 'household' at Phil 4:22: Diog. L. 5, 75 on Demetrius of Phalerum ἦν ἐκ τῆς Κόνωνος οἰκίας.

ὁράω (1aβ, end [= A1b]) = 'perceive' in the sense 'hear': Polyaeus 7, 14, 2; schol. on Nicander, Ther. 165 ὁρῶ οἶα λέγεις.

πειράζω (2 [= 2b]) of God putting men to the test: Ps.-Apollodorus 3, 7, 7, 4. πληρόω (4a) of the fulfilment of divine prophecy: Polyaeus 1, 18 τοῦ λογίου πεπληρωμένου.

ποιέω of God as the Creator of the universe (s.v. κόσμος 2, end [= 3]): Epict. 4, 7, 6. As far as I know, the same meaning cannot be quoted for κτίζω from secular sources today. But it certainly is not insignificant that κτίστης in this sense was used of pagan divinities even in pre-Christian times.

φεύγω (5 [= 4]) ἀπὸ τοῦ προσώπου at Rv 20:11: Ctesias, Pers. 2 φυγεῖν ἀπὸ προσώπου Κυρίου; schol. on Nicander, Ther. 377. Herodas the writer of mimes 8, 59 has, in a passage inaccurately cited by this scholion, ἔρρ' ἐκ προσώπου 'get out of my sight.'

φρονέω (1) ἄλλο = 'have a different opinion': Hdt. 7, 205, 3.

The closer Judaism and Hellenism approach each other in relation to the understanding of early Christianity, the more insistent becomes the question of how we may give proper credit to both of them. The use of the same words here and there does not mean that the language is identical. Both sides present their own challenge, and the author of a lexicon that seeks to shed light on primitive Christianity from the Greek world should have an ear for both. He must reckon with the possibility that what, for instance, Paul said, conditioned as he was by his Jewish past, was not always understood in the same terms by his gentile Christian hearers, who were also unable to dissociate themselves entirely from their previous ways of thought. Certainly, speaker and hearer were better attuned to each other when Paul addressed himself to Christians among whom he had worked, and the apostle was more certain to be understood correctly under these circumstances than when he wrote to people who did not know him personally. Yet even in Corinth, where Paul worked so long, there was a notable lack of understanding. It was not only that the old immorality lived on uncontrolled in some circles. The state of 'being long accustomed to idols' (1 Cor 8:7) had not yet died out for some of them. In general, there is much in 1 Cor that we can begin to understand only after we have made an effort to form some conception of pagan Greek life and thought.

When Paul speaks of sacrifice, of the wrath of God, or of the δικαιοσύνη θεοῦ, it is quite correct to understand his words from the standpoint of Judaism. But what about his public, who have heard these words before, but with different connotations [concepts, F.W.D.] and associations? His hearers certainly did not feel themselves challenged to make an eschatological decision as often as the apostle summoned them to it. With this in mind we might conclude that sometimes there are two meanings for the same passage, one from the standpoint of the writer and another which becomes evident when one puts one's self in the place of the recipient, intellectually and spiritually; the lexicographer naturally feels an obligation to draw the proper conclusions. The way a passage is understood by its first readers has an immediate effect upon its later interpretation. We know how hard it was to understand Paul's letters (2 Pt 3:15, 16), and in what manifold and sometimes contradictory fashion they have been interpreted.

I give herewith a few examples (not found in the fourth edition) to illustrate that different meanings have been associated with similar words:

On πολίτευμα Phil 3:20: Epict. 2, 23, 38; 39 'you have gone on a journey to return thither where you were born, and where you are a πολίτης' (39 = εἰς τὴν πατρίδα 38). Olympiodorus in Platonis Phaedonem [ed. W. Norvin (1913)] p. 122, 8 says of the wise man συμπολιτεύεσθαι τοῖς θεοῖς καὶ συνοικονομεῖν. On κρίνω (4bβ [= 5bβ]) 1 Cor 6:2, on the saints as fellow-rulers with God: Epict., Ench. 15; Sallustius 21 p. 36, 14 [ed. A. D. Nock (1926)] τὸν ὅλον κόσμον συνδιοικοῦσιν ἐκείνοις (the pious with the gods).

On εἰρήνη (3 [= 2b]) τοῦ θεοῦ: Epict. 3, 13, 12 εἰρήνη ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ κεκηρυγμένη διὰ τοῦ λόγου (= philosophy).

On 1 Cor 7:34f: Epict. 3, 22, 69 ἀπερίσπαστον εἶναι δεῖ τὸν Κυνικὸν ὅλον πρὸς τῇ διακονίᾳ τοῦ θεοῦ, coupled with an exhortation to keep one's self free from marriage and other earthly bonds. In such a case would a Greek not feel himself deeply moved by the apostle's preaching? Would he not receive its words with connotations familiar to him, and so pass them on to others? Sometimes one gets the distinct impression that the Greek must have failed to understand the basic meaning of a New Testament author. He may have been led in another direction by his own background and have lacked a knowledge of Jewish and Old Testament matters which the author took for granted:

On Mt 1:17, a better parallel than can be found in rabbinic literature may be pointed out in the numerological statements found as early as Hellenicus [400 b.c.] with γενεαί (no. 323a fgm. 22a Jac.): ἐννέα γενεαῖς ὕστερον ... ἔξ γενεαῖς ὕστερον ... τρισὶ γενεαῖς ὕστερον...

Boanηργές Mk 3:17 has less light shed on it by the unsatisfactory explanations of the word's meaning than by the fact that, among the Greeks, pairs of brothers or sisters are often referred to by a special name: Apollodorus no. 244 fgm. 210 Jac. Σταγόνιον καὶ Ἀνθὺς ἀδελφαί· αὗται Ἀφύαι ἐκαλοῦντο, ὅτι λευκαὶ κ. τ. λ. In Diog. L. 2, 52 Gryllus and Diodorus, the two sons of Xenophon, Διόσκουροι ἐπεκαλοῦντο. In schol. on Pla. 118e Εἰς ἀνθιππος καὶ Πάραλος οἱ Περικλέους υἱοί, οὓς καὶ βλιττομάμμας ἐκάλουν.

On Mt 15:27=Mk 7:28: Aelius Dionysius [II a.d.] α, 159 [ed. H. Erbse (1950)] ψωμὸς εἰς ὃν ἐκματτόμενοι τὰς χεῖρας μετὰ τὸ δεῖπνον ἐρρίπτουν τοῖς κυσίν.

On Lk 6:15; Ac 1:13: the word ζήλωτης as a surname of the second Simon may have been meant by the author to have the sense 'zealot'; his readers were much more likely to understand it as meaning 'enthusiastic adherent,' which it has so often meant (Polyaenus 5, 2, 22; Diog. L. 2, 113, al.).

At Mt 18:22 the number ἑβδομηκοντάκις ἑπτὰ probably comes from Gen 4:24. But Gentiles did not need to know this in order to understand that Mt means to indicate a number that is large out of all proportion. In a story taken from older accounts, Plut., Mor. 245d uses the number 7,777 for the same purpose (cp. Polyaenus 8, 33).

On Ro 13:1b: here Paul was possibly thinking of Wisdom 6:3 and similar Jewish sayings. But the Roman Christians were probably more impressed and encouraged by the 'old saying' (Artemidorus 2, 36 p. 135, 24, also 2, 69 p. 161, 17) τὸ κρατοῦν δύνανται ἔχει θεοῦ 'the government derives its power from God.' Similar sentiments are found as early as Hesiod, Theogony 96. This was an old Greek belief (H. Fränkel, Dichtung und Philosophie des frühen Griechentums [1951], 141, 5).

On 1 Cor 9:9: the apostle quotes the Law of Moses. But in connection with the words immediately following, the Greeks might easily think of their own proverb τῶν δ' ὄνων οὐ μοι μέλει (Aelius Dionysius τ, 35).

On 1 Cor 15:32: the writer certainly has Is 22:13 in mind, but it is just as certain that his readers are reminded of a very common and primitive piece of worldly wisdom brought to their attention by the tombs along the road (e.g., Explor. etc. [=IGal], Perrot et al. [see p. xxiv above], inscr. no. 78, 11). The writer of the Revelation, too, is no exception: When in his vision (10:9f) he swallows a book that 'makes' his stomach 'bitter,' the concept comes without doubt from Ezk 2:8; 3:1-3. But would the gentile Christians of Asia Minor not rather be reminded of the dream-books that interpreted ἐσθίειν βιβλία to mean an early death (Artem. of Ephesus 2, 45 p. 149, 6)?

And in connection with Babylon the Harlot (Rv 17:4) would they not think of something like the image portrayed on the painting of Cebes [I a.d.] 5, 1? Sitting on the throne is the beautifully adorned woman Ἀπάτη, ἡ ἐν τῇ χειρὶ ἔχει ποτήριόν τι. She gives men wine to drink (ποτίζει Cebes 5, 2 as Rv 14:8) and thus leads them astray (πλανάω as Rv 18:23).

Artemidorus 2, 70 p. 167, 25 asks the readers of his books μήτε προσθεῖναι μήτε τι τῶν ὄντων ἀφελεῖν, and in 168, 2ff he commends his work to the protection of Apollo, who commissioned him to write it and who helped him carry it to completion. Is this not a pagan commentary on Rv 22:18, 19 (and 1:9ff), and is it not worth more for a living understanding of these passages than the Old Testament parallels printed in heavy type in the editions?

What we can learn here and there about communal meals among the Greeks will, perhaps, shed some light on the observance of the Lord's Supper in Corinth. The references that we have come from the vicinity of that city, and they illuminate both the observance and the words used in connection with it. In order to gain a proper insight into this point it seems to me that we must do more than point out that rabbinical literature permits us to trace a Hebrew expression for 'sacred cup' back to about 300 AD:¹⁰

Diog. L. 8, 35 has Pythagoras say that the εἷς ἄρτος (cp. 1 Cor 10:17) had served as a symbol of the bond between φίλοι. Theopompus (in Athen. 4, 31, 149d) tells us about banquets in Arcadia at which the diners gathered about one table on which the food for all of them was set; likewise, they all drank from the same jar. κοινωνία with the genitive (1 Cor 10:16) is the common possession or enjoyment of something (Diog. L. 7, 124 al.). The eating together of the one loaf, which means the body of Christ (11:24), brings the many together in one body (10:17). We read of communal meals in Crete in the historian Pyrgion (Hellenistic times; no. 467 fgm. 1 Jac.) that they were consecrated by the offering of a libation with prayer (μετ' εὐφημίας) at the beginning of them. When the offering has been made, the food is distributed to all present. The νεώτατοι waited on the tables.

¹⁰Similarly, the importance of the word in the services of the church at Corinth cannot be understood from the viewpoint of the Synagogue (W. Bauer, Der Wortgottesdienst der ältesten Christen [1930], pp. 19ff). On the other hand, it is from I Cor that we learn how tolerant Paul could be of heathen customs (eating meat offered to idols, baptism for the dead). And the same letter proclaims as one of the basic principles of his mission to the Gentiles: 'To those who do not know the Mosaic law I became as one who does not concern himself about it, in order to win them' (9:21).

Is it too bold to look upon the Corinthian sacral meal as a Christianized communal dinner at which the consecration was brought about by a calling to mind of what had happened on the last evening of Jesus' life? The unseemly conduct that Paul condemned (11:17–22) had a strong 'heathen' tone to it. And similar occurrences were a cause for concern to serious-minded Greeks long before this time. Dicaearchus [300 b.c.] fgm. 59 [ed. F. Wehrli (1944)] complains of carelessness and encroachment upon the rights of others at common meals, which should really serve to make brothers of those who eat together. Eratosthenes [III b.c.] no. 241 fgm. 16 Jac. waxes bitter over the fact that at the festival of the Lagynophoria each one eats what he has brought along and drinks from his own (ἰδιος as 1 Cor 11:21) bottle, which he has brought with him. His judgment is as severe as that of the apostle: 'such a festal meeting is a dirty thing [mob affair, F.W.D.], ἀνάγκη γὰρ τὴν σύνοδον γίνεσθαι παμμιγοῦς ὄχλου.'

There is at least something comparable to the unworthy partaking of the Eucharist and its results (1 Cor 11:29f). Simplicius in Epict. p. 93, 51–53 Düb. tells in detail how the divine power (ἐνέργεια) passes over to first-fruits that are offered with a pure heart. Someone, so he says, has asserted that he was cured of his epilepsy by eating such first-fruits. With the unseemly conduct described by Paul we may contrast the conduct ἀπὸ ζωῆς καθαρᾶς in Simplicius line 49. Just as the eating of the consecrated food, laden with divine power, can bring healing when it is accompanied by a pure life, so in Corinth participation in the Lord's Supper, coupled with the wrong kind of conduct, can bring illness or even death.

Finally, one more proposal, which may possibly illuminate the meaning ἀγάπη (II [= 2]) 'love-feast.' Scholia on Pla. 122b: the common meals of the Lacedaemonians καλεῖται φιλίτια, ἐπεὶ φιλίας συναγωγὰ ἐστίν. If it is permissible to see in ἀγάπη a transfer of φιλία into the Christian realm, this passage can shed light on the custom as well as the vocabulary of the Christians.

At times the information in the fourth edition [of Bauer's Wörterbuch] seems in need of correction or supplementation:

On ἀρπάζω (2b, end) τι Mt 11:12. The meaning 'plunder, pillage something thoroughly' is also possible: Libanius, Or. 1 p. 147, 4F. κώμας ἀρπάζειν; Polyaeus 8, 11 τῆς πόλεως ἀρπαγή.

On ἱκανός (1c [= 1]) Mk 15:15 τὸ ἱκανὸν ποιεῖν τινι better: 'do someone a favor' Diog. L. 4, 50.

On καρτερέω Hb 11:27. The translation 'endure, hold out' is hardly correct. This is apart from the question whether this quality is particularly characteristic of Moses. The participle with καρτερεῖν does not express an accompanying circumstance, but the respect in which someone is 'enduring' or 'constant.' Diod. Sic. 14, 65, 4 μέχρι τίνος καρτερήσομεν ταῦτα πάσχοντες; 'how long will we continue to endure this?' Arrian, Anab. 7, 8, 3 οὐκ οὐκ σιγῇ ἔχοντες ἐκατέρησαν = 'they therefore continued in silence.' Ps.-Dicaearchus, Βίος Ἑλλάδος [ed. M. Fuhr (1841), p. 141, line 11 = C. Müller, GGM I (1855) p. 99 I] ἀκούων καρτ. = 'keep on listening.' So in Hb 11:27, giving the reason for his fearlessness: 'for he kept his eyes constantly upon him who is unseen.'

On ρύομαι 2 Cor 1:10a. ῥ. ἐκ τοῦ θανάτου does not mean 'preserve from death' in general, but 'rescue from a(n actual) situation in which death was threatened': Aristoxenus [300 b.c.] fgm. 113 [ed. F. Wehrli (1945)] ρύεσθαι καὶ ἐρύεσθαι διαφορὰν ἔχει πρὸς ἀλλήλα. τὸ μὲν γὰρ ρύεσθαι ἐκ θανάτου ἔλκειν, τὸ δὲ ἐρύεσθαι φυλάττειν.

On λυπέω (1) abs.: in 2 Cor 2:5 it is more than 'vex' or 'cause grief.' Polyaeus 8, 47 uses it of the severe humiliation felt by a king whose subjects have deposed him.

On πῶλος I have presented material which I hope is significant and more to the point in a study that appeared in JBL 72 (1953), 220–29.

In the case of certain entries, new and better examples have turned up: On ἀδελφός (1). There is no longer any doubt in my mind that ἀδελφοί can mean 'brothers and sisters' in any number. There are passages that scarcely permit any other interpretation. Ptolemaeus, Apotelesm. 3, 5 has as its subject περί γονέων and 3, 6 περί ἀδελφῶν, divided into male and female. The meaning is so clear that F. E. Robbins [1948] rightly translates the second title 'Of Brothers and Sisters.' Likewise Diog. L. 7, 108; 120 al.

On ἀπό (II 3a [= 2ca]) Jd 14: Diog. L. 3, 1 in the list of descendants Plato is ἔκτος ἀπὸ Σόλωνος.

On σὺ εἶπας (εἶπον 1 [= 1a]) Mt 26:25, 64: schol. on Pla. 112e Socrates says in declining or yielding: σὺ ταῦτα εἶπες, οὐκ ἐγώ.

εὐνουχίζω (literally) as early as Clearchus IV/III b.c. fgm. 49 [ed. F. Wehrli (1948)].

φαντάζομαι of a theophany (Athena) in Ps-Aristotle, Mirabilia 108.

φωτισμός in Strato of Lampsakos [300 b.c.] fgm. 76 [ed. F. Wehrli (1950)]. I shall add some passages here in which the subject is of interest, as well as the words themselves:

On ἀναγινώσκω (2 [= b]): at the end of the sixth letter of Plato we read ταύτην τὴν ἐπιστολὴν πάντας ὑμᾶς ἀναγνῶναι χρή, just as 1 Th 5:27.

On Γαλατία: for Memnon of Asia Minor, a slightly older contemporary of Paul, the Galatians (of whom he speaks now and again: no. 434 fgm. 1, 11ff Jac.) are the people who came from Europe to Asia Minor, with a very definite national composition and tone. He would certainly never address Lycaonians as Γαλάται. For him, Γαλατία is the land of these particular people (e.g., fgm. 1, 20, 2).

On ἐγὼ εἰμί J 8:58. Ammonius Hermiae (Comm. in Aristot. IV 5 ed. A. Busse [1897]) c. 9 p. 136, 20f: in the Timaeus (37e) it is written that one should not say of the gods τὸ ἦν, ἢ τὸ ἔσται, μεταβολῆς τινος ὄντα σημαντικά, μόνον δὲ τὸ ἔστι.

On ἐξέλκω Js 1:14: Pla., Ep. 7, 325b εἶλκεν δέ με ἡ ἐπιθυμία.

On ἱλάσκομαι Lk 18:13: Sb 8511, 7 ἱλαθί μοι, Μανδοῦλι (a divinity), σῶζε με.

On κεράτιον Lk 15:16: fodder for swine as Lycophron, Al. 675–78.

On πᾶσα Ἱεροσόλυμα Mt 2:3: of the inhabitants as Pla., Ep. 7, 348a πᾶσα Σικελία; Demosth. 18, 18 ἡ Πελοπόννησος ἅπασα.

On Ac 9:1: Saul breathing out murder has a parallel in Theocr. 22, 82: the two opponents φόνον ἀλλήλοισι πνέοντες.

The parallel in language can be absent entirely, and yet there may be significant similarities in subject matter. This is especially true of some passages from Diogenes Laërtius:

Diog. L. 2, 14 has a story of Hieronymus of Rhodes concerning the trial of Anaxagoras. Pericles puts on a scene with the latter, his teacher, in order to arouse the sympathy of the judges. In Nicol. Dam. no. 90 fgm. 68, 4 Jac., in connection with the fall of Croesus, Cyrus lets a woeful spectacle take its course βουλόμενος καὶ τοὺς Πέρσας οἰκτόν τινα λαβεῖν αὐτοῦ. Compare the Ecce Homo J 19:5.

Diog. L. 2, 48 Socrates stops Xenophon at their first meeting and says: 'ἔπου καὶ μάνθανε.' καὶ τοῦντεῦθεν ἀκροατῆς Σωκράτους ἦν. Cp. ἀκολουθεῖω (3).

Diog. L. 2, 127 Menedemus the philosopher [300 b.c.], in whose presence someone has acted in an unseemly manner, διέγραφεν εἰς τοῦδαφος. By doing this he shames him. Cp. J 8:6, 8.

Diog. L. 3, 19 Plato awaits a verdict before the popular assembly on the island of Aegina that could mean death, but says not a word (μηδ' ὀτιοῦν φθέγξασθαι). Cp. Mt 26:63; Mk 14:61, and σιωπάω (1).

Diog. L. 6, 97 Crates the Cynic goes about with his like-minded wife, seeking adherents for his cause. Cp. 1 Cor 9:5.

Now and then everything is clear from a linguistic point of view, but the subject matter poses questions for which an answer should at least be sought among the Greeks:

Why does Mt (13:55) say of Jesus τοῦ τέκτονος υἱός for Mark's ὁ τέκτων (6:3)? Aristoxenus [300 b.c.] fgm. 115 (ed. F. Wehrli [1945]) describes Sophillus, the father of Sophocles, as τέκτων. The Vita Sophoclis 1 rejects this and will only admit that he owned τέκτονες as slaves.

Why do we read in 1 Cor 15:5 of οἱ δώδεκα, when Judas the traitor has disappeared from the scene? The variant ἑνδεκα shows that the problem was felt. 'The Twelve' is a fixed expression, like οἱ τριάκοντα in Athens. Xenophon, Hell. still refers to them in these terms in 2, 4, 23, despite the fact 2, 4, 19 tells of the deaths of Critias and Hippomachus.

These examples must suffice. They represent a small sampling from the work of gathering parallels during the years 1951 and 1952. No one need fear that the task is almost finished and that there are no more parallels to be found. One who gives himself to this task with any devotion at all cannot escape the feeling thus expressed: how great is the ocean, and how tiny the shell with which we dip!

2. The Old Testament and Intertestamental/Pseudepigraphical Literature

THE OLD TESTAMENT LITERATURE is cited according to the LXX in the edition of A Rahlfs (1935; freq. reprinted), unless it is expressly stated that the quotation is from the translation of Aq(uila), Sym(machus), or Theod(otion). Occasionally reference is made to HSwete, The Old Testament in Greek, 3 vols. 1887–94. The following codices are sometimes cited in ref. to LXX readings: A (=Alexandrinus), B or Vat. (=Vaticanus [not Barnabas, in whose case the abbr. B is clear from the context]), S/Sin/Sin. (=Sinaiticus or 8). Unless otherwise specified, all divisions of the OT text follow Rahlfs. For discrepancies in the numbering of portions of the OT see F Danker, Multipurpose Tools for Bible Study, rev. ed. 1993, 77f. In addition to pseudepigrapha cited below, reference is freq. made to ‘Denis’ = Fragmenta pseudepigraphorum quae supersunt Graeca, ed. A M Denis 1970. Books included in Rahlfs ed. are noted with an asterisk (*).

6. Sigla

+ when used at the beginning of entries indicates that the lexeme is found not only in the first document cited, but also in inscriptions, papyri, LXX (Septuagint), pseudepigrapha, Philo, Josephus, and one or more apologists. Occasionally the + is followed by a more complete listing because of special philological considerations.

Textual Sigla: These are for the most part used only in connection with very damaged texts, or when traditional restorations or supplements invite renewed examination. Note, e.g., the contrast between readings in AcPIBMM and POxy 1081.

α β, letters of which sufficient traces remain to print as text, but not to the exclusion of other possible readings

. . . ., letters missing, up to the number noted by the editor

- - - -, lost or illegible letters of an uncertain number

[[αβ]], letters lost from document and restored by editor

α' or ᾱ, letter stands for a numerical equivalent

|, marker of line division

//, marker of a duplicate document, as in some AcPIHa references

αβ, letter(s) which the scribe or corrector added

(αβ), letters which fill out an abbreviation in the text αβ, letters omitted by scribe and added by editor (not to be confused with [αβ])

recto, the front of a writing sheet

verso, the back of a writing sheet

A α

Α, α, τό [[A]] indecl. (s. ἄλφα) first letter of the Gk. alphabet, alpha (cp. SibOr 5, 15) hence as numeral α' = 1 (one εἷς or first πρῶτος e.g. TestSol, PVindobBosw at 18:34; oft. in pap): πρώτη (or πρωτέρα?, in pap freq. = πρότερον, q.v.) in titles of letters ἐπιστολή: 1 Cor; 1 Th; 1 Ti; 1 Pt; 1J; 1 Cl; ἐντολή Hm 1, title. As a symbolic letter A signifies the beginning, Ω the end (FBoll, Sphaera 1903, 469ff). The two came to designate the universe and every kind of divine and superhuman power. S. Rtzst., Poim. 256ff, Erlösungsmyst. 244; FBoll, Aus d. Offb. Joh. 1914, 26f. The Sator-anagram of Pompeii (JDaniélou, Primitive Christian Symbols, tr. DAttwater '64, 99–101) offers the earliest Christian usage. In the expr. ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ ἄλφα καὶ τὸ ὦ the letters are explained as beginning and end Rv 1:8 v.l.; 21:6 (s. OWeinreich, ARW 19, 1919, 18of); as first and last 1:11 v.l.; and as both 22:13 (cp. Mel., P. 105, 812 [B]). Is. 44:6 offers precedent for the πρῶτος/ ἔσχατος in this and related rabbinic symbolism.—S. on Ω and FCabrol, Dict. d'Arch. I, 1, 1–25; FDornseiff, D. Alphabet in Mystik u. Magie² 1925, 17f; 122ff; RCharles, HDB I 70.—TW.

II 58; PKatz, TLZ 83, '58, 315f vocative ἄδελφε should be accented on the antepenult in Ac 9:17; 21:20 contrary to the practice of the editions; also GPt 2:5.) 1 a male from the same womb as the reference pers., brother, Mt 1:2, 11; 4:18, 21 al.; τὸν ἄ. τ. ἴδιον J 1:41 (s. Jos., Ant. 11, 300). Of Jesus' brothers (passages like Gen 13:8; 14:14; 24:48; 29:12; Lev 10:4; 1 Ch 9:6 do not establish the mng. 'cousin' for ἄ.; they only show that in rendering the Hebr. תִּיִּתָּה ἄ. is used loosely in isolated cases to designate masc. relatives of various degrees. The case of ἀδελφή [q.v. 1] is similar Gen 24:59f; Tob 8:4, 7 [cp. 7:15]; Jos., Ant. 1, 211 [ἀδελφή = ἀδελφοῦ παῖς]. Sim. M. Ant., who [1, 14, 1] uses ἄ. for his brother-in-law Severus; the same use is found occas. in the pap: JCollins, TS 5, '44, 484–94; s. VTscherikover HTR '42, 25–44) Mt 12:46f; 13:55; Mk 3:31f; J 2:12; 7:3, 5; Ac 1:14; 1 Cor 9:5. James ὁ ἀδελφός τοῦ κυρίου Gal 1:19. The pl. can also mean brothers and sisters (Eur., El. 536; Andoc. 1, 47 ἡ μήτηρ ἡ ἐκείνου κ. ὁ πατήρ ὁ ἐμός ἀδελφοί; Anton. Diog. 3 [Erot. Gr. I 233, 23; 26 Hercher]; POxy 713, 21f [97 a.d.] ἀδελφοῖς μου Διοδώρῳ κ. Θαι δι; schol. on Nicander, Ther. 11 [p. 5, 9] δύο ἐγένοντο ἀδελφοί, Φάλαγξ μὲν ἄρσιν, θήλεια δὲ Ἀράχνη τοῦνομα. The θεοὶ Ἀδελφοί, a married couple consisting of brother and sister on the throne of the Ptolemies: OGI 50, 2 [III b.c.] and pap [Mitt-Wilck. I/1, 99; I/2, 103–7, III b.c.]). In all these cases only one brother and one sister are involved. Yet there are also passages in which ἀδελφοί means brothers and sisters, and in whatever sequence the writer chooses (Polyb. 10, 18, 15 ποιήσεσθαι πρόνοιαν ὡς ἰδίων ἀδελφῶν καὶ τέκνων; Epict. 1, 12, 20 ἄδ. beside γονεῖς, τέκνα, γείτονες; 1, 22, 10; 4, 1, 111; Artem. 3, 31; Ptolem., Apotel. 3, 6; Diog. L. 7, 108; 120; 10, 18. In PMich 214, 12 [296 a.d.] οἱ ἀδελφοί σου seems to be even more general='your relatives'). Hence there is no doubt that in Lk 21:16 ἀδελφοί=brothers and sisters, but there is some room for uncertainty in the case of the ἀδελφοί of Jesus in Mt 12:46f; Mk 3:31; J 2:12; 7:3, 5; Ac 1:14. 2 a pers. viewed as a brother in terms of a close affinity, brother, fellow member, member, associate fig. ext. of 1. A one who shares beliefs (for an associated duality, s. Ἀμός, ὁ [[Amōs]] indecl. (on the corresp. Hebr. name s. EbNestle, ZNW 4, 1903, 188) Amos in genealogy of Jesus. 1 father of Mattathias, son of Nahum Lk 3:25. 2 son of Manasseh, father of Josiah Mt 1:10 (v.l. Ἀμών, q.v.); Lk 3:23ff D.

ἄν [[án]] 0 (after relatives ἐάν [q.v.] is oft. used for ἄν, but the mss. vary greatly, s. B-D-F §107; 377; Mlt. 42ff, 165ff; Mayser 152f; Crönert 130f; Thackeray 67; Dssm., NB 30ff [BS 202ff]). A particle peculiar to Gk. (Hom.+) denoting aspect of contingency, incapable of translation by a single English word; it denotes that the action of the verb is dependent on some circumstance or condition; the effect of ἄν upon the meaning of its clause depends on the mood and tense/aspect of the verb w. which it is used. The NT use of ἄν corresponds in the main to older Gk., although the rich variety of its employment is limited, as is generally the case in later Greek. In certain constructions (s. aβ) an aspect of certainty is indicated, suggesting the gloss would. In most other instances aspects of varying possibility or conditionality find expression in ways that can be rendered ever, but with other glosses required when ἄν is used in conjunction with other particles.

A ἄν w. aor. or impf. indic. α denoting repeated action in past time, but only under certain given conditions, esp. after relatives (B-D-F §367; Rob. index): aor. (Gen 30:42; Num 9:17; 1 Km 14:47; Ezk 10:11) ὅσοι ἄν ἤψαντο αὐτοῦ, ἐσώζοντο whoever touched him was cured Mk 6:56. Impf. (Ezk 1:20; 1 Macc 13:20; Tob 7:11) ὅπου ἄν εἰσεπορεύετο εἰς κώμας wherever he went (as he was accustomed to do—ADebrunner, D. hellenist. Nebensatziterativpräteritum mit ἄν: Glotta 11, 1920, 1–28) into villages Mk 6:56. καθότι ἄν τις χρεῖαν εἶχεν as anyone was in need Ac 2:45; 4:35. Similarly ὡς ἄν ἤγεσθε (v.l. ἀνήγεσθε) 1 Cor 12:2. Cp. also ὅταν 1βγ and δ. β in the apodosis of a contrary to fact (unreal) condition w. εἰ (B-D-F §360; but ἄν is not always used [s. the vv.ll. J 18:36]: §360, 1; Mlt. 199ff; PMelcher, De sermone Epicteteo 1905, 75); it is found α w. impf. (4 Macc 17:7; Bar 3:13; ParJer 5:20; GrBar 6:6; ApcMos 39) οὗτος εἰ ἦν προφήτης, ἐγίνωσκεν ἄν if he were a prophet, he would (now) know (but he does not) Lk 7:39. εἰ ἔχετε πίστιν ... , ἐλέγετε ἄν if you had faith ... , you would say 17:6. εἰ ἐπιστεύετε Μωϋσεῖ, ἐπιστεύετε ἄν ἐμοί J 5:46. εἰ ἐμέ ᾔδειτε, καὶ τὸν πατέρα μου ἄν ᾔδειτε 8:19; cp. vs. 42; 9:41; 15:19. εἰ ἔτι ἀνθρώποις ἤρεσκον, Χριστοῦ δοῦλος οὐκ ἄν ἦμην Gal 1:10; cp. 3:21. εἰ ἐαυτοὺς διεκρίνομεν, οὐκ ἄν ἐκρινόμεθα 1 Cor 11:31. εἰ ἦν ἐπὶ γῆς, οὐδ' ἄν ἦν ἱερεὺς if he were on earth, he would not even be a priest Hb 8:4; cp. 4:8; 8:7; 11:15. γ w. aor., placing the assumption in the past (Gen 30:27; Wsd 11:25; Jdth 11:2; 4 Macc 2:20; TestJob 7:9 al.; ParJer 5:5; GrBar 8:7; PGiss 47, 17) εἰ ἐγένοντο αἱ δυνάμεις, πάλαι ἄν ... μετενόησαν if the miracles had been performed, they would long ago have repented Mt 11:21. εἰ ἔγνωσαν, οὐκ ἄν ἐσταύρωσαν 1 Cor 2:8; cp. Ro 9:29 (Is 1:9). εἰ ἐγνώκειτε, οὐκ ἄν κατεδικάσατε if you had recognized, you would not have condemned Mt 12:7. εἰ ἠγαπάτέ με, ἐχάρητε ἄν if you loved me, you would have rejoiced J 14:28; cp. 11:21. The plpf. for aor. indic. (PGiss 79 II, 6 εἰ δυνατόν μοι ἦν, οὐκ ἄν ὠκνήκειν; BGU 1141, 27f) εἰ ἦσαν, μεμενῆκεισαν ἄν 1J 2:19; cp. J 11:21 v.l.—In κἀγὼ ἐλθὼν σὺν τόκῳ ἄν αὐτὸ ἔπραξα Lk 19:23, ἐλθὼν functions as an unreal-temporal protasis (B-D-F §360, 2); cp. καὶ ἐλθὼν ἐγὼ ἐκομισάμην ἄν τὸ ἐμόν Mt 25:27. Sim. ἐπεὶ οὐκ ἄν ἐπαύσαντο προσφερόμεναι; where ἐπεὶ functions as protasis, otherwise (i.e. if the sacrifices had really brought about a lasting atonement) would they not have ceased to offer sacrifices? Hb 10:2.

B ἄν w. subjunc. after relatives, the rel. clause forming virtually the protasis of a conditional sentence (B-D-F §380, 1) of the future more vivid or present general type. α w. fut. or impf. in apodosis, to show that the condition and its results are thought of as in the future, of single and repeated action (IG XIV, 865 [VI b.c.] ὁ δ' ἄν με κλέψῃ, τυφλὸς ἔσται; TestAbr B 4 p. 109, 10 [Stone p. 66]). ὁ δ' ἄν ποιήσῃ καὶ διδάξῃ, οὗτος μέγας κληθήσεται but whoever does and teaches= if a person does and teaches it Mt 5:19. ὁ δ' ἄν ἐσθίῃ ... , ἔνοχος ἔσται 1 Cor 11:27. οὐς ἐάν (v.l. ἄν) δοκιμάσητε, τούτους πέμψω 16:3—Mt 10:11; 1 Cor 16:2. β w. pres. in apodosis, to show that the condition and its results involve repeated action, regardless of the time element: ἃ ἄν ἐκεῖνος ποιῇ, ταῦτα καὶ ὁ υἱὸς ὁμοίως ποιεῖ whatever he does, the Son does likewise J

5:19. ὅπου ἐάν (v.l. ἄν) αὐτὸν καταλάβῃ, ῥήσσει αὐτόν wherever it seizes him Mk 9:18. ὑμῖν ἐστὶν ἡ ἐπαγγελία ... ὅσους ἂν προσκαλέσῃται κύριος Ac 2:39. ὁ ὅς ἐάν (v.l. ἄν) βουληθῇ φίλος εἶναι τοῦ κόσμου, ἐχθρὸς τοῦ θεοῦ καθίσταται whoever wishes to be a friend of the world Js 4:4. Cp. ὅπου ἂν 3:4 v.l.—Where ὅς or ὅστις appears w. subj. without ἄν (but cp. IG XII/1, 671 ὁ ὅς ἀνασπαράξῃ τ. τάφον; CPR I, 24, 33; 25, 19; AcThom 93 [Aa II/2, 206], 19; Is 7:2; 31:4), the reading that gives the fut. ind. is prob. the right one: ὅστις τηρήσῃ (v.l. -σει) Js 2:10. ὅσοι (without ἄν PPetr I, 13, 3; 5; CPR I, 237, 3; IPergamon 249, 26 ὅσοι ... ἐγγίπωσι τὴν πόλιν; Vett. Val. 125, 16): ὅσοι μετανοήσωσιν καὶ καθαρίσωσιν Hs 8, 11, 3 (s. W. and Joly app. for the textual tradition). See Reinhold 108; B-D-F §380, 4. C In temporal clauses ἄν is found w. the subjunct. when an event is to be described which can and will occur, but whose occurrence cannot yet be assumed w. certainty. So α ὅταν (= ὅτε ἄν; s. δταν) w. pres. subjunct. to indicate regularly recurring action (Wsd 12:18): ὅταν ἄρτον ἐσθίωσιν whenever they eat bread Mt 15:2. ὅταν λαλῇ τὸ ψεῦδος whenever he tells a lie J 8:44. ὅταν λέγῃ τις whenever anyone says 1 Cor 3:4.—W. aor. subjunct. to express action in the future which is thought of as already completed (Sir Prol. ln. 22; Tob 8:21) ὅταν ποιήσῃτε πάντα when you have done Lk 17:10. ὅταν ἔλθῃ ὁ κύριος when the owner has come Mt 21:40; ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἐν τῇ δόξῃ Mk 8:38; cp. J 4:25; 16:13; Ac 23:35. ὅταν πάλιν εἰσαγάγῃ τὸν πρωτότοκον Hb 1:6. β ἡνίκα ἂν every time that (Ex 1:10; 33:22; 34:24 al.; POxy 104, 26 [96 a.d.]; PTebt 317, 18 [174/75] ἡνίκα ἐάν εἰς τὸν νόμον παραγένηται). ἡνίκα ἂν (also ἐάν mss.) ἀναγινώσκηται Μωϋσῆς every time that Moses is read aloud 2 Cor 3:15; cp. vs. 16. γ ὡσάκις ἐάν as often as: ὡσάκις ἐάν (also ἄν mss.) πίνῃτε 1 Cor 11:25. ὡσάκις ἐάν (also ἄν mss.) ἐσθίῃτε vs. 26. δ ὡς ἄν as soon as (PHib 59, 2 [c. 245 b.c.] ὡς ἄν λάβῃς; 66, 4; PEleph 9, 3 [III b.c.]; PParis 46, 18 [143 b.c.]; BGu 1209, 13 [23 b.c.]; Josh 2:14; Jdth 11:15; 1 Macc 15:9): ὡς ἄν πορεύωμαι as soon as I travel Ro 15:24. ὡς ἄν ἔλθω as soon as I come 1 Cor 11:34. ὡς ἄν ἀφίδω τὰ περὶ ἐμέ as soon as I see how it will go with me Phil 2:23. ὡς ἐάν (PFay 111, 16 [95/96]) Hv 3, 8, 9; 3, 13, 2.—ἀφ' οὗ ἄν after Lk 13:25.—In the case of temporal particles indicating a goal, viz. ἕως οὗ, ἄχρις (οὗ), μέχρις (οὗ), the mss. show considerable variation; the addition of ἄν is prob. correct only in rare cases (see B-D-F §383, 2). Only ἕως ἄν (PPetr II, 40a, 28 [III b.c.]) ἕως ἄν ὑγιαίνοντας ὑμᾶς ἴδωμεν; Gen 24:14, 19; 49:10; Ex 23:30 al.) has certain attestation: μένιντε ἕως ἄν ἐξέλθῃτε stay until you go away Mt 10:11. ἕως ἄν ἴδωσιν τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ θεοῦ Lk 9:27.—Mt 2:13; 5:26. ἕως ἄν λάβῃ Js 5:7 v.l.—ἀχρις οὗ (+ ἄν v.l.) ἔλθῃ 1 Cor 11:26. ἀχρις οὗ (+ ἄν v.l.) θῇ 15:25; ἀχρις οὗ ἄν ἦξῃ Rv 2:25 (v.l. ἀχρη). ἀχρις ἄν ἔλθῃ (cp. BGu 830, 13 [I a.d.] ἀχρις ἄν σοι ἔλθω) Gal 3:19 v.l.—πρὶν ἄν: πρὶν ἢ ἄν (vv.ll. πρὶν ἄν, πρὶν ἢ, only πρὶν or ἕως ἄν) ἴδῃ τὸν Χριστόν Lk 2:26 (B-D-F §383, 3). D In purpose clauses the Attic (EHermann, Griech. Forschungen I, 1912, 267f; JKnuenz, De enuntiatis Graec. finalibus 1913, 13ff; 26ff) ὅπως ἄν, esp. freq. in earlier ins (Meisterhans³-Schw. 254), has become quite rare (LXX still rather often: Gen 18:19; 50:20; Ex 33:13; Jer 7:23 al.) ὅπως ἄν ἀποκαλυφθῶσιν διαλογισμοί Lk 2:35. ὅπως ἄν ἔλθωσιν καιροί Ac 3:20.—15:17 (Am 9:12 v.l.); Ro 3:4 (Ps 50:6); Mt 6:5 v.l. E The opt. w. ἄν in a main clause (potential opt.) has almost wholly disappeared; a rare ex. is εὐξαίμην (v.l. εὐξάμην) ἄν Ac 26:29 in Paul's speech before Agrippa (literary usage; s. B-D-F §385, 1; also Rob. 938; Themist. 6 p. 80 D.—On the rarity of the potential opt. in pap, LXX, Apost. Fathers see CHarsing, De Optat. in Chartis Aeg. Usu, diss. Bonn 1910, 28; Reinhold 111). Cp.—also in the literary lang. of Lk—direct rhetor. questions (Gen 23:15; Job 19:23; Sir 25:3; 4 Macc 7:22; 14:10 v.l.; TestJob 13:5 τίς ἄν δώῃ 35:5) πῶς γὰρ ἄν δυναίμην; Ac 8:31. τί ἄν θέλοι οὗτος λέγειν; 17:18. Dg has also preserved the opt. as a mark of elegant style (2:3, 10; 3:3f; 4:5; 7:2f; 8:3). MPol 2:2 has τίς οὐκ ἄν θαυμάσειεν;—More freq. in an indirect ἀνακεφαλαίω [[anakephalaíō]] 1 aor. mid. ἀνεκεφαλαιώσάμην, pass. 3 sg. ἀνεκεφαλαιώθη (to be read for ἐνεκ-) GJs 13:1 (κεφάλαιον 'sum, sum total', s. DELG s.v. κεφαλή; Aristot. et al.; in OT only Theod. and the Quinta at Ps 71:20). 1 used of literary or rhetorical summation sum up, recapitulate (Aristot., Fgm. 133, 1499a, 33; Dionys. Hal. 1, 90; Quintil. 6, 1 rerum repetitio et congregatio, quae graece ἀνακεφαλαίωσις dicitur). Of individual commandments ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τούτῳ ἀνακεφαλαιοῦται everything is summed up in this word/statement (the command. of love; s. λόγος) Ro 13:9 (s. 2 below). ἀνακεφαλαιώσασθαι τὰ πάντα ἐν τῷ Χριστῷ to bring everything together in Christ Eph 1:10 (Ps.-Aristot., De Mundo 4, 1 τὰ ἀναγκαῖα ἀνακεφαλαιούμενοι=sum up the necessary points). ἁ. τὸ τέλειον τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν complete the total of the sins B 5:11 (κεφαλαιώσει cod. V). The interpretive var. κεφαλαιώ (q.v.) suggests that ἁ. was also used in a commercial sense, or that it could be readily so understood, but that κεφαλαιώ is the more normal term for such a sense. In Ro 13:9 (s. 1 above) the immediate context suggests a commercial frame of ref. for the understanding of ἁ. as 'ledger entry', with retention of the full force of the prefix: ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τούτῳ ἀνακεφαλαιοῦται=is summed up completely under this (ledger) entry (cp. the use of πληρῶ Gal 5:14 and s. s.v. λόγος 2a).—SHanson, Unity of the Church in the NT '46, 123–26. WStaerck, RAC I 411–14.—M-M. This interpr., first set forth by Chrysostom (Hom. in Act. 38, 1), has found modern supporters (s. Haenchen ad loc.). The semantic issue arises from the fact that the narrative presents the auditors as theologically ignorant. Their assumption is that Paul seemed to be a proclaimer of 'new divinities' (vs. 18a). From their perspective the term ἀ. suggests a divinity named Resurrection (abstractions identified as divinities were not uncommon in the Gr-Rom. world, s. EA 19 '92, 71–73). ἀπόδεκτος, ον [apódektos] (s. ἀποδέχομαι) is accented thus almost exclusively in the NT tradition (but s. CGregory, Prolegomena to Tdf. NT⁸ 1894, 100f), but ἀποδεκτός elsewhere (Plut., Mor. 1061a; Sext. Emp., Math. 11, 83; so also OGI 441, 100 ἀποδεκ[τὰ ὑπάρχει] ν δεῖν). Strictly speaking, ἀποδεκτός means acceptable, welcome and ἀπόδεκτος pleasing (W-S. §6, 4; Mlt-H. 58). The former is given Dg 8:3 (cp. Just., A I, 43, 2 οὐθ' οὗτος ἀπόδεκτος οὐδὲ ἐκεῖνος μεμπτέος); the latter has been given preference in 1 Ti 2:3; 5:4, but the accentuation ἀποδεκτός for these pass. in the sense be approved, find approval deserves review, esp. when the administrative aspect of the next entry is considered in relation to the official-sounding tone of the Pauline pass.—M-M. ἀπόστολος, ου, ὁ [[apóstolos]] (s. ἀποστέλλω). In older Gk. (Lysias, Demosth.) and later (e.g. Posidon.: 87 Fgm. 53 p. 257, 21 Jac. [Strabo 3, 5, 5]) ὁ ἀ. is a naval expedition, prob. also its commander (Anecd. Gr. 217, 26). τὸ ἀπόστολον with (Pla., Ep. 7, 346a) or without (Vi. Hom. 19) πλοῖον means a ship ready for departure. In its single occurrence in Jos. (Ant. 17, 300; it is not found elsewh. in Jewish-Gk. lit.) it prob. means 'sending out'; in pap mostly 'bill of lading' (s. Preisigke, Fachwörter 1915), less freq. 'certificate of clearance (at a port)' (BGU V §64 [II a.d.] = Gnomon des Idios Logos). It can also be 'letter of authorization (relating to shipping)': Mitt-Wilck. I/2, 443, 10 (15 a.d.); PHerm 6, 11f (cp. Dig. 49, 6, 1 litteras dimissorias sive apostolos). In contrast, in isolated cases it refers to persons who are dispatched for a specific purpose, and the context determines the status or function expressed in such Eng. terms as 'ambassador, delegate, messenger' (Hdt. 1, 21; 5, 38; Synesius, Providence 2, 3 p. 122a ἀπόστολοι of ordinary messengers; Sb 7241, 48; BGU 1741, 6 [64 b.c.]; 3 Km 14:6A; Is 18:2 Sym.). Cp. KLake, The Word A.: Beginn. I 5, '33, 46–52. It is this isolated usage that is preferred in the NT w. nuances peculiar to its lit. ἀποστοματίζω [[apostomatízō]] (s. στόμα) is found since Pla. (Euthyd. 276c; 277a) w. the mnsgs. 'dictate for recitation' or 'repeat from memory' (ἀπὸ στόματος), which do not fit the context of Lk 11:53 (note that the passage is not text-critically certain; see Tdf.), but a transf. sense such as question closely, interrogate, quiz τινὰ περὶ τινος (so L-S-J-M s.v. I 2; cp. Pla. in Pollux 2, 102 [pass.]) is prob.; but s. Wlh. ad loc. Ancient commentators interpreted it as catch (him) in someth. he says=vs. 54; then approx. watch his utterances closely, but such exposition imposes excessive semantic burden on the context. On the analogy of ἐπιστοματίζω 'to silence' someone, Luke's usage may be rendered have him talk (about many things); the opposition expects Jesus to say someth. that would be incriminating, vs. 54.—DELG s.v. στομα. The abs. μή ἄψῃ you must not touch or handle Col 2:21 can be interpreted in this sense. On the other hand, ἄπτεσθαι can mean eat, like our 'touch food' (Od. 4, 60; Plut., Anton. 923 [17]; Chariton 6, 2, 8 οὐχ ἤπτετο τροφῆς; Arrian, Anab. 4, 9, 5 σίτου ἄπτεσθαι; Aelian, VH 12, 37 ἐπ' ἀπορία τροφῶν ἤψατο τῶν καμήλων=he seized [and ate] the camels; Diog. We would, then, have in this passage the anticlimax eat, taste, touch. Finally, θιγγάνω, like ἄπτ. and γεύομαι (q.v. 1) can mean eat (cp. Iambl., Vi. Pyth. 31, 191 κυάμων μὴ θιγγάνειν; 13, 61 γεύεσθαι=Porphy., Vi. Pyth. 24 θιγγάνειν; POxy 1185, 10f [c. 200 a.d.], where three diff. expr. for 'eat' are grouped together: τὸν παῖδα δεῖ ἄρτον ἐσθίειν, ἄλλας ἐπιτρώγειν, ὀψαρίου μὴ θιγγάνειν [eat, eat [with], not eat at all]). The combination ἐσθ., τρωγ., θιγγ. might corresp. to Col 2:21 ἄπτ., γεύ., θιγγ., taken to mean eat, enjoy, consume (ἂ. and γεύ. together, both='eat' in Teles p. 34, 5). The verbs, perh. used in association w. var. foods (s. POxy 1185) by the false spirits, are effectively combined by Paul, in order to picture the feeling of dread which he castigates. 4 to touch intimately, have sexual contact, of intercourse w. a woman (Pla., Leg. 8, 840a; Aristot., Pol. 7, 14, 12 [1335b]; Plut., Alex. 676 [21, 9]; M. Ἀρέτας, α, ὁ [[Harétas] (on the spelling s. Dssm. NB 11 [BS 183f]) a name which, in the form Ḥrīṭat, is often found in Nabataean inscriptions and among the Arabs, and was borne by Nabataean kings (Joseph. index). The one named 2 Cor 11:32 was Aretas IV (ruled c. 9 b.c. to 40 a.d.). Cp. Schürer I 581–83; ASteinmann, Aretas IV: BZ 7, 1909, 174–84, 312–41; also separately 1909; Ltzm., Hdb. ἀρετή, ἡς, ἡ [[areté]] (Hom.+, a term denoting consummate ‘excellence’ or ‘merit’ within a social context, hence freq. w. δικαιοσύνη; cp. the tripartite appraisal Pla., Protag. 329c: δικαιοσύνη, σωφροσύνη, δσιότης). Exhibition of ἀρετή invites recognition, resulting in renown or glory. In Homer primarily of military valor or exploits, but also of distinction for other personal qualities and associated performance that enhance the common interest. The term is a favorite subject in Stoic thought relating to morality. Theognis 147f summarizes Gk. thinking: ἐν δὲ δικαιοσύνη συλλήβδην πᾶς ἀρετὴ στί, πᾶς δὲ τ’ ἀνὴρ ἀγαθός, Κύρνε, δίκαιος ἔων=in a word, Cynus, all excellence lies in uprightness, and a good person is one who is upright. 1 uncommon character worthy of praise, excellence of character, exceptional civic virtue (Theognis 147; Aristot., EN a detailed discussion of ἀ.; s. indexes in OGI, SIG, IPriene, et al.; Herm. The latter sense ‘praise’ (pl.=laudes) has been maintained for 1 Pt 2:9, which is probably influenced by Is 42:12; 43:21. It is poss. that Semantically oriented auditors of 1 Pt interpreted the expression along such lines, but Gr-Rom. publics would in the main be conditioned to hear a stress on performance, which of course would elicit praise (cp. Plut., Mor. 535d).—AKiefer, Aretalogische Studien, diss. ἀρπαγμός, οὐ, ὁ [[harpagmós]] (rare in nonbibl. Gk.; not found at all in the Gk. transl. of the OT; in our lit. only in Phil 2:6). 1 a violent seizure of property, robbery (s. ἀρπάζω; Plut., Mor. 12a; Vett. Val. 122, 1; Phryn., Appar. Soph.: Anecd. Gr. I 36. Also Plut., Mor. 644a ἀρπασμός), which is next to impossible in Phil 2:6 (W-S. §28, 3: the state of being equal w. God cannot be equated w. the act of robbery). 2 As equal to ἀρπαγμα, someth. to which one can claim or assert title by gripping or grasping, someh. claimed w. change fr. abstr. to concr. (as θερισμός Rv 14:15, cp. J 4:35; ἱματισμός J 19:24). This mng. cannot be quoted fr. non-Christian lit., but is grammatically justifiable (Kühner-Bl. II p. 272; RLipsius, Hand-Comment. ad loc.). Christian exx. are Eus., In Luc. 6 (AMai, Nova Patrum Bibliotheca IV 165), where Peter regards death on the cross as ἀρπαγμός ‘a prize to be grasped eagerly’, and Cyrill. Alex., De Ador. 1, 25 (MPG, LXVIII 172c), Lot does not regard the angels’ demand (Gen 19:15ff) as a ἀρπαγμός ‘prize’.—Acc. to FVokes, on Phil 2:5–11 in Studia Evangelica 2, ’64, 670–75, forms in -μα may approach -μός forms in mng., but not vice versa, cp. πορισμός 1 Ti 6:5 (for rejoinder s. RMartin, Carmen Christi ’67, 137). A If ἀρπαγμός approaches ἄρπαγμα in mng., it can be taken ‘sensu malo’ to mean booty, (a) grab (so for ἄρπαγμα LXX), and only the context and an understanding of Paul’s thought in general can decide whether it means holding fast to someth. already obtained (ἀ.=‘res rapta’; so the Gk fathers, s. Lampe, s.v. B 1) or the appropriation to oneself of someth. that is sought after (ἀ.=‘res rapienda’).

B But a good sense is also poss., a piece of good fortune, windfall, prize, gain (Helioid., 7, 11, 7; 7, 20, 2 [= ἔρμαιον]; 8, 7, 1; Plut., Mor. 330d; Nägeli 43f)=ἔρμαιον (Isid. Pelus., Ep. 4, 22); again it remains an open question whether the windfall has already been seized and is waiting to be used, or whether it has not yet been appropriated. In favor of the former is the contrast between Adam (implied as a dramatic foil) and his anxiety about death and equality w. God and Jesus’ majestic freedom from such anxiety, with culmination in the ultimate vindication of Jesus, whose destiny contrasts with Adam’s implied fate: οὐχ ἀρπαγμὸν ἡγήσατο τὸ εἶναι ἴσα θεῷ did not consider equality w. God a prize to be tenaciously grasped. (Cp. the fortunes of Zeus: Diod S 3, 61, 4–6.) 3 Another, and less probable, mng. is (mystical) rapture, s. ἀρπάζω 2b and LHammerich, An Ancient Misunderstanding (Phil. 2:6 ‘robbery’), ’66, who would translate the phrase ‘considered that to be like God was no rapture’; a similar view was expressed by PFlorensky (1915), quoted in Dictionnaire de la Bible, Suppl. V, ’57, col. 24 s.v. kénose.—LSaint-Paul, RB n.s. 8, 1911, 550ff (pretext, opportunity); WJaeger, Her. 50, 1915, 537–53 (w. further support, RHooover, HTR 64, ’71, 95–119); AJüllicher, ZNW 17, 1916, 1–17; PSchmidt, PM 20, 1916, 171–86; HSchumacher, Christus in s. The phrases τοῦτο αὐ. 2 Cor 2:3 and αὐ. τοῦτο 2 Pt 1:5 are adverbial accusatives for this very reason (Pla., Prot. 310e [pl.]; X., An. 1, 9, 21; PGrenf I, 1, 14). 2 a ref. to a definite person or thing, he, him, she, her, it, they, them A αὐτός refers w. more or less emphasis, esp. in the nom., to a subject, oft. resuming one already mentioned: αὐ. παρακληθήσονται they (not others) shall be comforted Mt 5:4; cp. vs. 5ff. οὐκ αὐ. βλασφημοῦσιν; Js 2:7. αὐ. σώσει Mt 1:21 (cp. Mussies 169). Yet here αὐ. could mean alone (examples of this from Hom. on in many writers in WSchulze, Quaestiones epicae 1892, p. 250, 3) he alone was a Samaritan; but Luke's thematic interest in unexpected candidates for the Kingdom (cp. 5:30–32; 15:2; 19:2 [καὶ αὐτός]; 23:43) militates against the view. B The oblique cases of αὐ. very oft. (in a fashion customary since Hom.) take the place of the 3rd pers. personal pron.; in partic. the gen. case replaces the missing possessive pron. α w. ref. to a preceding noun διαφέρετε αὐτῶν Mt 6:26; καταβάντος αὐτοῦ 8:1; ἀπεκάλυψας αὐτά 11:25.—26:43f; Mk 1:10; 4:33ff; 12:19; Lk 1:22; 4:41. The gen. is sometimes put first for no special reason (Esth 1:1e) αὐτοῦ τὰ σημεία J 2:23, cp. 3:19, 21, 33; 4:47; 12:40. αὐτῶν τὴν συνείδησιν 1 Cor 8:12. Sim. Βαράκ, ὁ [[Barák]] indecl. (בָּרָק; in Jos. βάρακος, ου [Ant. 5, 203]) Barak, an Israelite general (Judg 4f), mentioned w. other heroes Hb 11:32.

Βαραχίας, ου, ὁ [[Barachías]] (בִּרְיָה; also Jos., Ant. 9, 250) Barachiah, name of the father of a certain Zechariah (Gk. Zacharias), who was killed in the temple (s. Ζαχαρίας 2) Mt 23:35; Lk 11:51 v.l. Acc. to GHb 284, 150f (as ViZech [p. 96, 25 Sch.]) this Zechariah was the son of Jehoiada, not of B., and so identified w. the Zech. who was stoned to death in the temple court, 2 Ch 24:20ff. Zech., the son of Berechiah, is the well-known prophet (Zech 1:1), who seems elsewh. to have been confused w. the murdered Z. (Pesikta R. Kahana 15). If the ref. in the gospels is to a biblical pers., the Zech. of 2 Ch (the last book in the Hebrew canon; Billerb. I 943; IV 422) must be meant, in which case Mt. has classified him with the prophets (for other views, incl. the possibility of a gloss, s. comm., esp. Allen and Zahn) Since this Z. was not the last prophet or just person to be killed, some scholars hold that the allusion is to Zacharias, son of Baruch, whom the Zealots killed 67/68 a.d. (Jos., Bell. 4, 334ff). See EbNestle, ZNW 6, 1905, 198–200; Wlh., Einl. 118–23; JChapman, JTS 13, 1912, 398–410; Rtzst., Herr der Grösse 34ff; JKennard, Jr., ATR 29, ’47, 173–79.

βιάζω [biázō] (Hom.+) nearly always as a mid. dep. βιάζομαι; aor. mid. ἐβιάσάμην, pass. 2 sg. ἐβιάσθης Sir 31:21. Apart fr. Dg. 7:4; 10:15 most of this entry concerns probabilities relating to β. in Mt 11:12 and par. Lk 16:16. The principal semantic problem is whether β. is used negatively ('in malam partem') or positively ('in bonam partem'), a problem compounded by the question of the function of these vss. in their literary context. In Gk. lit. β. is most often used in the unfavorable sense of attack or forcible constraint (s. L-S-J-M). 1 to inflict violence on, dominate, constrain w. acc. A variation of this interpretation is the sense try hard, but the support sought in Epict. 4, 7, 20f is questionable, for this latter pass. rather refers to attempts at forced entry when one is not welcome. 4 constrain (warmly) if βιάζεται Lk 16:16 is to be understood as a passive, as POxy 294, 16 (22 a.d.), or in the same sense as the mid. in Gen 33:11; Judg 13:15, the sense would be invite urgently of the 'genteel constraint imposed on a reluctant guest' (so vHoffmann et al.; s. βίος, ου, ὁ [[bíos]] (s. βιώω; Hom.+; Hermas prefers ζώη) 'life' in its appearance and manifestations freq. distinguished from ζώη, the condition of being alive, cp. Plotin. 3, 7, 11, 4; Schmidt, Syn. 327–30. Although there is freq. overlapping in usage, βίος may be said to denote the manner in which one's ζώη finds expression (cp. Plut., Mor. 114d τῆς ζωῆς βίος), and the latter term may be used to connote quality of existence as such (cp. IPriene 105, 10 the birth of Augustus marked the 'beginning of life (βίος) and living (ζωή)'; s. also line 49; cp. Od. 15, 491; X. Mem. 3, 3, 11 and Cass. Dio 69, 19 'Here lies Similis, alive [βιώω] for a number of years, but really living [ζάω] for seven'). Hence, as the semantic history shows, the loss of βίος need not terminate ζώη (q.v.).

Celsum 8, 38 with reff. to Ex 22:27; Ro 12:14; 1 Cor 6:10). Hence the caution about denigrating the devil. Impious denigration of deity is esp. heinous and many translations reflect this emotive value in the loanword ‘blasphemy’. But Greco-Roman and Semitic minds would first of all, as Ac 19:37 and Rom 2:24 indicate, think in terms of disrespect shown or harm done to a deity’s reputation, a fact obscured by the rendering ‘blasphemy’, which has to some extent in Eng. gone its own emotive way semantically and has in effect become a religious technical term, which is not the case with βλασφημέω. Cp. EpJer 10, where a few mss. have βρώσις instead of βρώματα w. ἰός. This combin. argues against the identification of βρώσις w. ἰός in Mt, and it is not likely that a hendiadys is present. The interpretation corrosion, rust finds no support outside this passage. In the medical passages that have been adduced (cp. Galen 6, 422 [pl.]; 12, 879 ed. Kühn 1823) β.= 'decay' of teeth. In this sense our sources of information on the Jerusalem temple speak of γαζοφ. in the pl. (2 Esdr 22: 44; Jos., Bell. 5, 200; 6, 282) and sg. (1 Macc 14:49; 2 Macc 3:6, 24, 28, 40; 4:42; 5:18; 2 Esdr 23: 5, 7; Jos., Ant. 19, 294). It can be taken in this sense J 8:20 (sing.) in (or at) the treasury (for the use of ἐν in the sense of 'near' [the public would of course not be permitted in the treasure room(s)] see s.v. ἐν 1c. But it is quite prob. that J may be using the term γ. loosely of the area generally known as the 'treasury', which would have the equivalent of a vault; the prep. would then be used in its customary locative sense). 2 For Mk 12:41, 43; Lk 21:1 the mng. contribution box or receptacle is attractive. Acc. to Mishnah, Shekalim 6, 5 there were in the temple 13 such receptacles in the form of trumpets. But even in these passages the general sense of 'treasury' is prob., for the contributions would go the treasury via the receptacles.—Billerb. II 37–46. GKaminski, JDAI 106, '91, 63–181.—M-M.

Γαλατία, ας, ἡ [[Galatía]] (Diocles 125; Appian, Mithr. 17 §60; 65 §272 al.; Cass. Dio 53, 26; ins) Galatia, a district in Asia Minor, abode of the Celtic Galatians, and a Roman province to which, in addition to the orig. Galatia, Isauria, Cilicia, and northern Lycaonia belonged. The exact mng. of G. in the NT, esp. in Paul, is a much disputed question. Gal 1:2; 1 Cor 16:1; 2 Ti 4:10 (in this pass. some mss. have Γαλλίαν, and even the better attested rdg. Γαλατίαν can be understood as referring to Gaul: Diod S 5, 22, 4 al.; Appian, Celts 1, 5 al.; Polyaeus 8, 23, 2; Jos., Ant. 17, 344; other ref. in Zahn, Einl. I 418.—To avoid confusion, it was possible to say something like Γαλατία τῆς ἐφ᾽ ἄρας=eastern [Appian, Bell. Civ. 2, 49 §202] or Γαλάται οἱ ἐν Ἀσίᾳ [Appian, Bell. Civ. 4, 88 §373]); 1 Pt 1:1. For the NT there are only two possibilities, both of which involve the Galatia in Asia Minor. The view that G. means the district orig. inhabited by the Galatians (North Gal. theory) found favor with Mommsen (ZNW 2, 1901, 86), ASteinmann (esp. detailed, D. Leserkreis des Gal. 1908), vDobschütz, Jülicher, MDibelius, Feine, Ltzm., JMoffatt, Goguel, Sickenberger, Lagrange, Meinertz, Oepke, EHaenchen (comm. on Ac 16:6), et al. Impressive support is given this point of view by Memnon of Asia Minor, a younger contemporary of Paul. For him the Galatians, of whom he speaks again and again (no. 434 Fgm. 1, 11ff Jac.), are the people with a well-defined individuality, who came to Asia Minor from Europe. Paul would never have addressed the Lycaonians as Γαλάται.—The opp. view, that G. means the Rom. province (South Gal. theory), is adopted by Zahn, Ramsay, EMeyer, EBurton (Gal 1921), GDuncan (Gal '34), esp. VWeber (Des Pls Reiserouten 1920). S. also FStähelin, Gesch. d. kleinasiat. Galater² 1907; RSyme, Galatia and Pamphylia under Aug.: Klio 27, '34, 122–48; CWatkins, D. Mt 24:38; Mk 12:25 D. Pass. be given in marriage, be married Mt 22:30; Mk 12:25; Lk 17:27; 20:35.—In 1 Cor 7:38, γ. abs. and w. acc. may be understood in this sense of a father who gives his daughter (or a guardian who gives his ward) in marriage (v.l. ἐκγαμίζω). But mng. 2 appears more probable. 2 Because of the context in 1 Cor 7:36–38, where the relation of virgins to Christ is featured, it is best to take γ. vs. 38= γαμέω to take as spouse, marry (on this s. Ltzm., Hdb. ad loc.; B-D-F §101 p. 44 agrees; s. also Mlt-H. 409f. It is hard to say how far the rule of Apollon., quoted above, applies, since there are so few exx. of γ. In any case, his observation indicates that mistakes could be made in the use of either term. On the increasing frequency of formations in -ίζω s. Psaltes p. 325–31. γαμίζω='marry' is also found in Methodius, Sympos. 3, 14 p. 44, 21 Bonwetsch). In the context of vss. 36–38 παρθένος would then mean either a Christian's fiancée (s. ref. to Goodsp. below and NRSV), or perh. even his 'spiritual bride', who lived with him as a virgin. FGrosheide, καὶ γάρ in het NT: TSt 33, 1915, 108–10. γάρ καὶ for also, for precisely 2 Cor 2:9 (ParJer 7:6 εἰς τοῦτο γάρ καὶ ἀπεστάλην). τε γάρ for indeed (X., Mem. 1, 1, 3) Ro 1:26; 7:7; Hb 2:11 (s. τέ 2b). μὲν γάρ (3 Macc 2:15f) often followed by δέ, ἀλλὰ Ac 13:36; 23:8; 28:22; 2 Cor 9:1; 11:4; Hb 7:20; 12:10 (s. μὲν 1aα, β); ὅτι μὲν γάρ ... ἀλλὰ Ac 4:16. καὶ γάρ οὐ 1 Cor 11:9; οὐ γάρ Mt 10:20; Mk 4:22; 6:52; J 3:17; Ac 2:34; Ro 1:16; 2:11, 13, 28; 4:13; 1 Cor 1:17; 2 Cor 1:8; Gal 4:30 and oft. μὴ γάρ Js 1:7 (TestAbr A 2, 79, 9 [Stone p. 6]; GrBar 6:6). οὐδὲ γάρ Lk 20:36; J 5:22; 7:5; 8:42; Ro 8:7; Gal 1:12 (s. οὐδέ 2). οὔτε γάρ ... οὔτε (Wsd 12:13; Sir 30:19) for neither ... nor 1 Th 2:5. C γάρ is somet. repeated. It occurs twice either to introduce several arguments for the same assertion, as (Sir 37:13f; 38:1f; Wsd 7:16f) J 8:42; 1 Cor 16:7; 2 Cor 11:19f; or to have one clause confirm the other, as (Jdth 5:23; 7:27; 1 Macc 11:10) Mt 10:19f; Lk 8:29; J 5:21f, 46; Ac 2:15; Ro 6:14; 8:2f; Hv 5:3; or to have various assertions of one and the same sentence confirmed one after the other Mt 3:2f; J 3:19f (cp. Wsd 1:5f; EpJer 6; 7). γάρ also occurs three times (Wsd 9:13–15; 14:27–29) Mt 16:25–27; Lk 9:24–26; Ro 4:13–15; 2 Cor 3:9–11; four times Mk 8:35–38; Ro 1:16–18; even five times 1 Cor 9:15–17. D the general is confirmed by the specific Mk 7:10; Lk 12:52; Ro 7:2; 1 Cor 12:8; —the specific by the general Mt 7:8; 13:12; 22:14; Mk 4:22, 25; Ro 2:2 v.l. E oft. the thought to be supported is not expressed, but must be supplied fr. the context: (He has truly been born) for we have seen his star Mt 2:2. (Let no one refuse) ὅς γάρ ἐὰν θέλῃ Mk 8:35; Lk 9:24. (Let no disciple fail to testify) ὅς

ς γάρ ἐὰν ἐπαισχυθῇ με Mk 8:38. This is common; cp. Ac 13:36; 21:13; 22:26; Ro 8:18; 14:10; 1 Cor 1:18; 5:3; 9:9, 17; 14:9. Sim. w. other particles καὶ γάρ Mt 15:27; 2 Cor 5:2; 13:4; Phil 2:27; 1 Th 3:4; 4:10. καὶ γάρ οὐ 2 Cor 3:10. μὲν γάρ Ro 2:25; 1 Cor 5:3; 11:7; 2 Cor 9:1; Hb 7:18. οὐ γάρ Mt 9:13; Mk 9:6; Lk 6:43f; Ac 4:20; Ro 8:15; 2 Cor 1:13 (also s. καὶ 2ia, and μὲν 1aα). F oft. in questions, where the English idiom leaves the word untransl., adds then, pray, or prefixes what! or why! to the question (Hyperid., Fgm. 219; Ael. Aristid. 47, 27 K.=23 p. 452 D.; TestJob 23:8 τί γάρ μοι ἡ θρίξ ...; Jos., Bell. 1, 589, Ant. 9, 92) ἵνατί γάρ ... κρίνεται for what reason ... should be judged 1 Cor 10:29. ποῖον γάρ κλέος; what credit is there? 1 Pt 2:20. μὴ γάρ ... ἔρχεται; what! Is the Messiah to hail fr. Galilee? J 7:41. μὴ γάρ οἰκίας οὐκ ἔχετε; what! Have you no houses? 1 Cor 11:22. S. μή 3a. — ποῖα γάρ ἡ ζωὴ ὑμῶν; what, pray, is your life? Js 4:14 v.l. πῶς γάρ ἂν δυναίμην; how in the world can I? Ac 8:31.—Esp. τίς γάρ; τί γάρ; in direct questions: Mt 9:5; 16:26; 23:17, 19 al. τί γάρ κακὸν ἐποίησεν; why, what crime has he committed? 27:23; sim. Mk 15:14; Lk 23:22. τί γάρ; transitional, well, then Ro 3:3; what does it matter? Phil 1:18. 2 marker of clarification, for, you see (Dionys. Hal., De Isocr. p. 542 Raderm.; Lucian, Dial. Mort. 10, 9 p. 373 κοῦφα γάρ ὄντα; BGU 830, 20 ἐπεὶ γάρ καὶ γείτων αὐτοῦ εἰμί=since I am also, as you see, his neighbor; Ps.-Demetr. 153 p. 35, 16 R.; Ps.-Callisth. 3, 2, 2 ἐγὼ γάρ=for I) Mt 12:40, 50; 23:3; 24:38; Mk 7:3; Lk 8:40; 9:14; J 3:16; 4:8f; Ro 7:2; Hb 2:8; 3:4; 2 Pt 2:8; AcPlCor 2, 4; 35.—Brief, explanatory parenthetical clauses (En 107:3 μυστηριακῶς γάρ ἐδήλωσεν αὐτῷ; Diod S 13, 66, 6 ἦν γάρ ὁ Κλέαρχος χαλεπός) Mt 4:18; Mk 1:16; 2:15; 5:42; 16:4; Ro 7:1; 1 Cor 16:5; Gal. 4:25 v.l. (cp. γάρ δὴ 1 Cl 42:5). Akin to explanatory function is the use of γάρ as a narrative marker to express continuation or connection (in later Gk. writers, where more recent users of the texts, not finding the causal force they expect, would often prefer to see it replaced by δέ; unnecessarily, since the grammarian Trypho Alex. [I b.c.], Fgm. 54 ed. AvVelsen 1853 shows clearly that γάρ under certain circumstances εἰς οὗν ἐστὶν ἀντὶ τοῦ δέ=is one and the same thing as δέ). Indeed, in many instances γάρ appears to be used adverbially like our 'now' (in which the temporal sense gives way to signal an important point or transition), 'well, then', 'you see' (e.g. Diod S 20, 35, 1 'now'; Iambl., Vi. Pyth. §1; 120; 158; 197 [LDeubner, Bemerkungen z. Text der Vi. Pyth. des Jambl.'35, 30f]; Arrian, Ind. 33, 1 ἀλλὰ ἔπλων γάρ ... =well, then, they sailed ...; schol. on Od. 4, 22 p. 174, 10 Dind.; 'moreover' SIG 1109, 28 [II a.d.]; 'in the first place' Jos., Bell. 7, 43, 'now' Ant. 1, 68); Ro 1:18; 2:25 ('indeed', 'to be sure' as Jos., Ant. 11, 8); 4:3; 9; 5:7 ('but'); 12:3; 14:5; 1 Cor 10:1 (v.l. δέ); 2 Cor 1:12; 10:12; 11:5 (B δέ); Gal 1:11 (v.l. δέ); 5:13; 1 Ti 2:5. Cp. ἡμεῖς γάρ J 9:28 v.l.—Confirming (Arrian, Ind. 22, 6 ἀλλὰ ἐκπεριπλῶσαι γάρ ... μέγα ἔργον ἐφαίνετο=but to sail seaward seemed indeed a dangerous undertaking; Philo, Leg. All. 3, 192 ἄσασαι μὲν γάρ ... =What has just been stated is apparent from the fact that all ...). Especially in replies γάρ confirms what has been asked about (B-D-F §452, 2) yes, indeed; certainly 1 Th 2:20; 1 Cor 9:10. 3 marker of inference, certainly, by all means, so, then. In self-evident conclusions, esp. in exclamations, strong affirmations, etc. (Diogenes the Cynic in Diog. L. 6, 47 παῦσαι γάρ=stop, then) μὴ γάρ οἰέσθω ὁ ἄνθρωπος ἐκεῖνος not for a moment let such a person think Js 1:7; μὴ γάρ τις ὑμῶν πασχέτω by no means let any of you suffer 1 Pt 4:15; ἀναλογίσασθε γάρ τὸν ... ὑπομεμενηκότα yes indeed, consider him who endured Hb 12:3; οὐ γάρ no, indeed! Ac 16:37 (Aristoph., Nub. 232, Ran. 58; Pla., Rep. 492e; Lucian, Jupp. Conf. 16). In weakened sense it is somet. resumptive, esp. in long periodic sentences: ἠὲ δόκησαν γάρ they decided, then Ro 15:27. ἐλεύθερος γάρ ὢν though I am free, then 1 Cor 9:19 (cp. vs. 1). Sim. 2 Cor 5:4. Many questions w. γάρ have both inferential and causal force.—S. τοιγαροῦν.—CBird, Some γάρ Clauses in St Mark's Gospel: JTS n.s. 4, '53, 171–87.—DELG. M-M.

γέ [[gé]] (Hom.+; apolog. exc. Ar.) enclit. particle, appended to the word or words it refers to; as in Hom.+ it serves to "focus the attention upon a single idea, and place it, as it were, in the limelight: differing thus from δή, which emphasizes the reality of a concept (though in certain respects the usages of the two particles are similar)" (Denniston 114). In oral utterance it would be accompanied by a change in pitch of voice at certain points in the context, and a translator may use an adverb or indicate the point through word order, choice of typeface, or punctuation at least, even, indeed, etc.

γενεά, ἄς, ἡ [[geneá] (Hom.+; ins, pap, LXX, En; TestSol C 13:7; TestJob, Test12Patr; GrBar 10:3; Philo, Joseph., SibOr, Just., Tat.) a term relating to the product of the act of generating and with special ref. to kinship, frequently used of familial connections and ancestry. Gener. those descended fr. a common ancestor, a 'clan' (Pind., P. 10, 42 the Hyperboreans are a ἱερὰ γενεά; Diod S 18, 56, 7; Jos., Ant. 17, 220), then 1 those exhibiting common characteristics or interests, race, kind gener. as in Lk 16:8 εἰς τὴν γ. τὴν ἑαυτῶν the people of the world are more prudent in relation to their own kind than are those who lay claim to the light (diff. GBeasley-Murray, A Commentary on Mk 13, '57, 99–102). 2 the sum total of those born at the same time, expanded to include all those living at a given time and freq. defined in terms of specific characteristics, generation, contemporaries (Hom. et al.; BGU 1211, 12 [II b.c.] ἕως γενεῶν τριῶν); Jesus looks upon the whole contemp. generation of Israel as a uniform mass confronting him ἡ γ. αὕτη (cp. Gen 7:1; Ps 11:8) Mt 11:16; 12:41f; 23:36; 24:34; Mk 13:30; Lk 7:31; 11:29–32, 50f; 17:25; 21:32 (EGraesser, ZNW Beih. 22,² '60). S. also 1 above. This generation is characterized as γ. ἄπιστος καὶ διεστραμμένη Mt 17:17; Mk 9:19 D; Lk 9:41; ἄπιστος Mk 9:19; πονηρὰ Mt 12:45; 16:4 D; Lk 11:29; πονηρὰ κ. μοιχαλὶς Mt 12:39; 16:4; μοιχαλὶς καὶ ἀμαρτωλὸς Mk 8:38 (JGuillet, RSR 35, '48, 275–81). Their contemporaries appeared to Christians as γ. σκολιὰ καὶ διεστραμμένη (the latter term as Mt 17:17; Mk 9:19 v.l.; Lk 9:41, the former Ac 2:40; cp. Ps 77:8) Phil 2:15 (Dt 32:5).—Cp. Wsd 3:19. A more favorable kind of γ. is mentioned in Ps 23:6; 111:2; 1QS 3:14.—The desert generation Hb 3:10 (Ps 94:10). ἰδίᾳ γ. ὑπηρετήσας after he had served his own generation Ac 13:36; γ. ἡμῶν 1 Cl 5:1; αἱ πρὸ ἡμῶν γ. 19:1; πρώτη γ. the first generation (of Christians) Hs 9, 15, 4 (Paus. 7, 4, 9 τετάρτη γενεά=in the fourth generation). 3 the time of a generation, age (as a rule of thumb, the time between birth of parents and the birth of their children; since Hdt. 2, 142, 2; Dionys. There is no doubt about the thing referred to, namely the strange speech of persons in religious ecstasy. The phenomenon, as found in Hellenistic religion, is described esp. by ERohde (Psyche³ 1903, Eng. tr. 1925, 289–93) and Reitzenstein; cp. Celsus 7, 8; 9. The origin of the term is less clear. Two explanations are prominent today. The one (Bleek, Heinrici et al.) holds that γλώσσα here means antiquated, foreign, unintelligible, mysterious utterances (Diod S 4, 66, 7 κατὰ γλώτταν=according to an old expression). The other (Rtzst., Bousset et al.) sees in glossolalia a speaking in marvelous, celestial languages. L. 5, 36; Celsus 3, 55) gener. a specialist in one or more of the processes in the treatment of cloth, incl. fulling, carding, cleaning, bleaching. Since the Eng. term ‘fuller’ refers to one who shrinks and thickens cloth, a more general rendering such as cloth refiner is required to cover the various components. In our lit. (only Mk 9:3) ref. is to the bleaching aspect, without suggesting that the term applies only to one engaged in that particular feature. Hence such glosses as ‘bleacher’ or ‘fuller’ would overly limit the professional niche.—DELG s.v. κνάπτω. M-M.

Quotation of the Gospels as such begins to make its appearance in Justin, but concern for literal accuracy is first to be found in Irenaeus. In general, the authors of our lit. quote the Gospels with as little care for precision as that exhibited e.g. by Maximus Tyr. in his citation of 'the ancients' (KDürr, Philol. Suppl. VIII 1900, 150f). The close acquaintance of Christians with Scripture has its parallels in the familiarity of the Greeks with Homer. Heraclit. Sto. I p. 2 ln. 3ff: ἐκ πρώτης ἡλικίας a child is trained on Homer and is to be occupied to the end of life with his epics.—DELG s.v. γράφω. M-M. EDNT. TW. Sv.

δαιμόνιον, ου, τό [daimónion] (substant. neut. of the adj. δαιμόνιος [s. 2 below δαιμόνιον πνεῦμα], quotable since Homer; OGI 383, 175; Herm. Wr. 10, 19; Ps.-Phoc. 101; En 19:1; TestSol; GrBar 16:3; Philo; Jos., Bell. 1, 373; 6, 429) in Gk. lit. the δαιμον-family refers in general to powerful entities that transcend ordinary experience. After Homer's time, the adj. δαιμόνιος means anything 'sent from heaven' or 'that which is divine' and the subst. τὸ δ. comes to mean 'divine manifestation' or 'heaven', as in our expression 'what heaven decrees' (Hdt. 5, 87, 2; cp. SIG 601, 15; Jos., Bell. 1, 69); or simply 'the divine' (Eur., Bacch. 894); cp. SIG 545, 14 (of religious piety). In our lit. the subst. gener. denotes a malevolent force. 1 transcendent incorporeal being w. status between humans and deities, daemon (as distinguished from demon, which in Eng. gener. connotes inimical aspect), semi-divine being, a divinity, spirit, (higher) power, without neg. connotation. The subst. was freq. used by Hellenes in a gener. sense esp. of independent numinous beings or divinities, as distinguished from a more personalized θεός, e.g. nymphs, Panes, and Sileni (Pla., Symp. 23 p. 202e πᾶν τὸ δαιμόνιον μεταξύ ἐστὶ θεοῦ τε καὶ θνητοῦ='every δ. is between a god and a mortal'; cp. The term is common in adjurations, e.g., δαιμόνιον πνεῦμα, w. ref. to the spirit of the departed as possessing extraordinary powers: lead tablet fr. Hadrumetum [Dssm., B 26, 35 (BS 271ff)]; PGM 4, 3038; 3065; 3075). ξένων δ. καταγγελεύς a preacher of strange divinities Ac 17:18 (cp. Pla., Apol. 26b; X., Mem. 1, 1, 1 καὶνὰ δαιμόνια εἰσφέρειν). 2 a hostile transcendent being w. status between humans and deities, spirit, power, hostile divinity, evil spirit, the neg. component may be either specific or contextual, and w. the sense commonly associated w. the loanword 'demon' (δ. φῶλα: Chrysipp. [Stoic. Beings of this type are said to enter into persons and cause illness, esp. of the mental variety (GrBar 16:3 ἐν μαχαίρᾳ ... ἐν δαιμονίοις as punishment; Jos., Bell. 7, 185 [of the spirits of deceased wicked people], Ant. 6, 166ff; 211; 214; 8, 45ff): δ. εἰσέρχεται εἰς τινα Lk 8:30; δ. ἔχειν Mt 11:18; Lk 7:33; 8:27; J 7:20; 8:48f, 52; 10:20. ἔχων πνεῦμα δαιμονίου ἀκαθάρτου who was under the control of an unclean power Lk 4:33. ῥίψαν αὐτὸν τὸ δ. vs. 35; cp. ἔρρηξεν 9:42. δέ [[dé]] (Hom.+) one of the most common Gk. particles, used to connect one clause to another, either to express contrast or simple continuation. When it is felt that there is some contrast betw. clauses—though the contrast is oft. scarcely discernible—the most common translation is ‘but’. When a simple connective is desired, without contrast being clearly implied, ‘and’ will suffice, and in certain occurrences the marker may be left untranslated (Denniston 162–89; Schwyzer 2, 562; B-D-F §447).—Usually δέ comes second in its clause, somet. third (Menand., Epitr. 355 S. [=179 Kö.]; Lucian, Tim. 48, Dial. Mar. 4, 2; Alex. Aphr., Fat. 36, II 2 p. 208, 20; 209, 6) Mt 10:11; 18:25; Mk 4:34; Lk 10:31; Ac 17:6; 28:6 al., occasionally fourth (Menand., Epitr. 281 S. [105 Kö.]; Archimed. II 150, 10 Heib.; Lucian, Adv. Ind. 19 p. 114; PHib 54, 20 [245 b.c.]; Wsd 16:8; 1 Macc 8:27; 4 Macc 2:15) Mt 10:18; J 6:51; 8:16; 1 Cor 4:18; 1J 1:3, or even fifth (Lucian, Apol. 12 p. 722; Alex. Aphr., An. Freq. used in lists of similar things, with a slight call of attention to the singularity of each item (cp. Hom., Il. 3, 144–48).—In tightly knit lists Mt 1:2–16; 2 Pt 1:5–8; relating one teaching to another (in this respect δέ is similar to the use in 2) Mt 5:31; 6:16; Ro 14:1; 1 Cor 7:1; 8:1; 12:1; 15:1; 16:1. Freq. w. the art. in narrative to mark change in the dramatis personae, e.g. Mt 14:17f, Mk 14:31. 2 a marker linking narrative segments, now, then, and, so, that is Mt 1:18, 24; 2:19; 3:1; 8:30; Mk 5:11; 7:24; 16:9; Lk 3:21; 12:2, 11, 13, 15f, 50; 13:1, 6, 10; 15:1, 11 al.; Ac 4:5; 6:1, 8; 9:10; 12:10, 17, 20; 23:10; 24:17; Ro 8:28; 14:1 (s. 1 above); 1 Cor 16:12, 17; 2 Cor 4:7; 8:1; Gal 3:23. δεισιδαιμονία, ας, ἡ [[deisidaimonía]] In the ancient Mediterranean world δ. refers to concern about one's relations to the transcendent realm (e.g. Polyb. 6, 56, 7; Dio Chrys. 44 [61], 9) exhibited especially in time of war; also viewed as a motivating force (Diod S 1, 70, 8; 11, 89, 6; 8; Jos. Ant. 10, 42). Because such concern is ordinarily expressed in observance of specific religious rites or customs, δ. can denote 'rite' or 'ceremony' (OGI 455, 11). 1 When fear of offending divinity expresses itself in extraordinary ways, δ. denotes religious scruple, religiosity (e.g., Jos., Ant. 14, 228; 15, 277; Jos., Bell. 2, 174). To Romans, for whom public order was of primary interest, and to Hellenes, who valued moderation, excessive anxiety could be prejudicial to the interests of the State, and was described through qualified use of the term δ. (Polyb. 12, 24, 5; Plut., Sol. 12, 4 [84], Alex. 75, 1 [706], Mor. 66c, s. his work Περί τῆς δεισιδαιμονίας; Agatharchides in Jos., Ant. 12, 5f 'ill-timed religious scruples or piety'; idem C. Ap. 1, 208; Herm. Wr. 9, 9; extreme forms of δ. are satirized as 'superstition' Theophr., Char. 16, and distinguished from εὐσεβία Philo, Spec. Leg. 4, 147; s. also Tatian's contemptuous description: 22, 1). Such negative viewpoint (gener. expressed in the Lat. 'superstitio'; in ref. to Christians cp. Pliny, Ep. Traj. 10, 96 [97], 9; Suetonius, Nero 16, 2) is reflected Dg 1:1; 4:1 (cp. M. Ant. 6, 30 θεοσεβῆς χωρὶς δεισιδαιμονίας 'god-fearing without fussy piety'). 2 system of cultic belief or practice, religion (OGI 455, 11; Jos., Ant. 14, 228; 19, 290 on Rom. religious tolerance; reciprocity is expected from others: Jews are forbidden by Claudius τὰς τ. ἄλλων ἐθνῶν δεισιδαιμονίας ἐξουθενεῖν='to ridicule the religious practices of other nationalities'; cp. Ac 19:37; Ro 9:22) ζητήματα περὶ τῆς ἰδίας δεισιδαιμονίας εἶχον they had some points of dispute about their religion Ac 25:19 (because of the author's apparent appreciation of Rom. religious tolerance it is not prob. that satire is to be inferred here).—HBolkestein, Theophrastos' Charakter der Δεισιδαιμονία als religionsgesch. δεισιδαίμων, ον [[deisidaimōn]] gen. ονος can, like δεισιδαιμονία, be used in a denigrating sense 'superstitious' (cp. Field, Notes 125–27), but in the laudatory introduction of Paul's speech before the Areopagus Ac 17:22 it must mean devout, religious (so X., Cyr. 3, 3, 58, Ages. 11, 8; Aristot., Pol. 5, 11 p. 1315a, 1; Kaibel 607, 3 πᾶσι φίλος θνητοῖς εἰς τ' ἀθανάτους δεισιδαίμων) comp. for superl.
